Fancy Apples Bring Good Price—Sales Are Slow.

Northwestern Fruit Exchange reports the apple situation today as follows.

The market is about unchanged since last quotations. The demand is rather sluggish, and seems to center now in low priced hard winter varieties, principally Ben Davis. We have had a number of inquiries for strictly fancy well colored Ben Davis, running mostly to four tier. Buyers are exacting and seem not to want 4 1-2 tier or the choice grades, so that we have been unable to fill several orders offered us around $1.10 to $1.15. The fruit is wanted for cold storage and of course would have to be in hard keeping condition.

We have the following sales since the last report:

P. F. E. 5881, 700 boxes of light colored fancy Rome Beauties, from Boise, Idaho, October 30; 308 128c, balance larger at $1.50 straight, f. o. b. shipping point.

G. N. 91598 from Cashmere, Wash., November 1, 547 extra fancy Winesaps, 50 fancy Winesaps at $2; 23 choice Winesaps at $1.50 all f. o. b. Cashmere.

G. N. 91314, from Sherman's Spur, Wash., October 26, 544 extra fancy Stayman Winesaps, 64 Fancy Staymans, 25 extra fancy Rome Beauties, 7 fancy Rome Beauties at $1.50 straight f. o. b.

This represents the present extreme limit of the market for Stayman Winesaps. We have been getting 10 to 25 cents premium over the general market by finding buyers in out-of-the-way places. Competitors are offering Staymans at so much lower prices that we are obliged to sell somewhere near in the line in order to get orders.—Journal.

THE WINSTON ATTRACTION.

Good Number for Tonight at the Steward by Stock Company.

Another capacity house greeted the Winston players at the Steward Opera House last night to witness the production of "The Mansion of Aching Hearts" and to say that the large audience was pleased would be but meagre praise. The play tells a beautiful story, well written and splendidly handled by the company. Miss Winston excelled herself in the role of Margie Tempest, treating her audience to a piece of emotional acting that was superb in its realism. W. S. Van Dyke as George Tempest was exceedingly good, handling the part with a quiet forcefulness that is rare in the young actor of the present day. The other parts were all well played and the performance was a fine one. The costuming was excellent and the general opinion was that the company was the best ever seen here. Tonight the offering will be that beautiful story of Virginia entitled, "A Princess of the South" with Miss Winston in the title role, one of her greatest soubrette creations. This company has firmly established itself as a prime favorite.

Eggs a Real Standard

Corvallis, Ore., Nov. 9 (Special)—That utility measured by the egg and meat production is the real standard for the determination of the value of a hen and on the shape and color of feathers is the proposition upon which Professor James Dryden of the Oregon Agricultural college, in a bulletin which has just gone to press, takes issue with the editors of the American Standard of Perfection and breeders of fancy chickens.

"To encourage the poultry industry says Professor Dryden, hundreds of poultry shows are held each year and thousands of dollars are paid on premiums and all the premiums are awarded on the basis of the American Standard of Perfection.

"We think we are encouraging the poultry industry by paying premiums for the feathers and other fancy points and for shape of body, and farmers go to the shows to purchase their breeding stock. They never suspect that the premiums indicate nothing of the egg laying qualities of the fowl.

"The best poultry keeper in the country is the farmer and the farmer's wife. I have been ashamed many times in my chicken career that we who were "educating the farmers" were raising sickly, constitutionally weak chickens, and then go on to a farm and see running around the barnyard, without attention or care, thrifty, robust lively chickens. We are slaves to the dogma of the featherlumer and the Standard and the farmer produces the eggs. I believe that the farm stock, the cross bred stock, or shall I say, the mongrel stock, have better vitality, are more fertile and are less preyed upon by diseases and produce more eggs than the average flock of pure breeds.

"The way to develop the poultry industry is to stop advocating pure bred or standard bred fowls for the farmer. He should decide on the type of fowl to breed and forget the names of the breed. Let him decide whether he wants an egg type, a meat type or a general purpose trype and then purchase pure bred fowls and grade up the flock. He should start with cross bred fowls and use pure bred males to bring up the grade. The country wants eggs and poultry and we cannot get these by building on the foundation of feathers or fancy points.

"To discover the egg type we have to use the trap nest or some other means of keeping a record of eggs laid by individual hens. The trap nest is about the best thing we have discovered in the poultry business. We will make slow improvement in breeding without an egg record for each hen in the flock. The objection to the trap nest is that it requires too much labor for the farmer. I believe that the state or experiment station should come to the rescue here by establishing a breeding station where farmers could secure at nominal prices cockrels of good laying pedigree to mate with their flocks. It would not take very long to furnish every farmer with a male bird whose ancestry during two generations has a record of 150 eggs a year.

Won't Let American Land.

Tacoma, Nov. 5—The local immigration bureau is up against it. When the Japanese liner arrived in port there was an American woman who said she was Mrs. Vera Hyland aboard, but she positively refused to give her age and consequently is not allowed to land despite the fact that she is undoubtedly American born.

Mrs. Hyland says she knows President Taft will make trouble for the officials if they don't let her land.
