SENTIMENT IN FAVOR MORE ACTION AND LESS ORATORY.

Nothing But Appropriations to Claim Attention of the Solons.

Part of the plan to limit the session of the legislature to not more than 20 days, instead of 40, is to insist that all bills carrying an appropriation and designed to go into the appropriation measure must be prepared and ready for introduction within the first few days of the session, says the Telegram.

In addition to this there will be a resolution designating the last day on which new bills can be introduced. To make the legislature smooth sailing and business-like, all measures of importance, of which there are but three or four, will be carefully prepared before the legislature convenes. Appointment of committees by the president and speaker can be accomplished in a day, and once these are announced and bills distributed, the lawmakers can get down to business without delay.

In a 40-day session, at least half the time is wasted on the introduction and consideration of measures which never become laws. These measures clutter the committees and kill valuable time. For instance, in the session of 1909 there were 698 bills introduced in the session of 1907 there were 700 bills introduced. In the 1909 session a large percentage of the measures were salary grab bills and several days were consumed in the Normal school appropriation act.

For the coming session the amount of real legislation called for is insufficient. There are not half a dozen measures in contemplation which are of state-wide interest, and these are now being drafted so as to be ready for introduction without delay. With so many business men and professional men occupying seats in the coming legislature, the wish to curtail the length of the usual session and confine the work to the barest needed legislation in general. Men with business affairs are heavy losers by attending a long session and those who have no particular private business cannot well afford the expense entailed by 40 days, when the pay is $3 and expenses $5.

The quicker the work of the legislature can be disposed of and the members return to their homes and private affairs, the more satisfied the majority will be. Letters are being exchanged between the various representatives and senators sounding the sentiment for a short session, and so far as known, there is not a member who does not heartily endorse the plan to be short and quick with the session of 1911. So far as legislation goes, there is less for the coming session to undertake than any previous session for several years.
