Franklin Would Have Been Amazed

If his vision could have extended far enough into the base of evolution to foresee the ultimate triumph of incandescent electric lighting—the GENERAL ELECTRIC MADZA LAMP.

The sage old philosopher flew his kite during a thunder storm, and by means of a key attracted and discovered electricity, but evolution decreed that modern inventive genius should discover an incandescent lamp that is revolutionizing artificial light.

THE GENERAL ELECTRIC MADZA LAMP gives nearly three times the light of the ordinary carbon incandescent—and costs no more to operate. In addition to this it gives light of a vastly superior quality—a clear white light like the sun's rays.

Everywhere people are having their houses wired for electric light, since the invention of the GENERAL ELECTRIC MADZA LAMP. It has made electricity as cheap as it is convenient. Come in for a moment today and let us prove to your entire satisfaction that there is no longer a possible excuse for you to be without the greatest of all household conveniences—electric light.

What Others Think.

Miss Grace Cameron as Nancy, in the play of that name, began a three night's engagement on Sunday evening at the Colonial theatre. "Nancy" is the story of rural and city life in New York state, throughout which the author has distributed smiles and tears with a lavish hand, says the Salt Lake Tribune. At first Nancy is very unpromising. She is a simple giggling girl, utterly irresponsible, and whose child-love is brutally repulsed by her father. The father lives only for Flora, his eldest daughter, who poses to him as a reigning society queen of New York City, but who, in reality is a member of a tough theatrical company and of doubtful morals.

To keep this daughter in comfortable circumstances, as he thought, but really to keep the show going for her lover, the father disposes of all his earthly goods, reduces himself and Nancy to poverty, that the New York girl might live her life. She comes home for Christmas, demanding money, and when this is refused she steals the only thing left to the little family, a pair of earrings which are heirlooms, and escapes from the old home. Nancy is accused by the old man of being the thief, and is sent out into the world on the sold night, when all the world is expected to be happy and full of forgiveness, in the most approved tear-producing fashion. But Nancy makes good despite her natural handicaps, the sinning sister is humbled and a good taste is left in the mouth at the end.

Miss Cameron as Nancy was the center about which everything revolved, and she awayed her audience with her humor and pathos at her will. She was in splendid voice in acts two and three with the songs, "Good-bye, My Dear Old Home" and "If Adam Had never Been Introduced to Eve." Miss Louise Wagner as Flora maintained an unlikable part with pleasing ability, having that useful asset, beauty. Al. C. Newman as Ezra Peckham looked and acted the part of the farmer father, and the company throughout was able and enjoyable.

"Nancy" appears at the Steward theatre December 14.

Change at Orpheum.

The Orpheum offers tonight Sworn and Westbrook, song and dance artists, and they are said to be the best the world produces. Connected with the strongest circuits in the country these artists have pleased the most fastidious crowds. The remainder of the change is of excellent value.

Picture Stories Please.

The Isis held a large audience last evening to see the pleasant picture stories. The Isis never fails in results. Supremacy of the films and the superb lighting has won for this house an enviable reputation throughout the entire coast. Its manager makes a study of the moving picture business day to day and there is nothing new in the east that does not find its way immediately to the Isis in La Grande.

Big Socialist Vote.

Olympia, Dec. 7.—An enormous socialist vote is revealed by the election returns canvassed by the state board today. The highest socialist vote was 15,994 for W. E. Richardson for supreme judge, a gain of 12,970 votes over the highest socialist vote for supreme judge in 1908. In the congressional elections the socialists polled three times as many votes as they did two years ago.

The republican and democratic percentages were about normal, although the total vote cast for congressman this time was only 135,296 as against 167,850 compared with two years ago. The official vote on congressman and supreme court judges follows:

Feeling a Part

By REGINALD D. HAVEN

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

"I never did but one good act in my life," said the old counterfeiter. "There wasn't much credit in it to me, but it was productive of a lot of happiness to others. It occurred many years ago, and as I am now a very old man and have a very long, troubled life to look back upon, including several terms in the penitentiary, it stands out from the rest of my acts in odd contrast.

"It was in the summer of 1850 that several of us got together in a northern city and manufactured a number of twenty dollar counterfeit bills. As soon as we had finished the job we destroyed the outfit, divided the bills and started for different parts of the country to put them out on the public, my section being the south. Boarding one of the crack steamers of that day, I started for New Orleans. In order the better to impose on people I dressed myself in ministerial black and wore a white cravat. I had been an actor and could personate a clergyman, or any one else, for that matter, to perfection.

"The main cabin of the steamers running on the Mississippi river in those days, when the table was not set for meals, was occupied principally for gambling. Poker, seven-up, euchre and other games were played, though the parties playing were not large and often two persons only occupied a table. I was sitting on the guards one day when a negro came out of the cabin, wringing his hands.

"'What's the matter, boy?' I asked. "'Mars' done gone lose me to a nigger trader. Ma wife an' pickaninnies won't neber see me no mo'."

"I found that his master, a planter, had taken him to Cairo as his body servant, was returning, had lost all the money he had with him at cards, staked his dinky and lost him too. I went into the cabin, where the planter and the trader were settling up, the planter being at the moment occupied in making out a bill of sale for the slave.

"I beg your pardon, sir," I said to the planter. "On account of my vocation I am opposed, of course, to gambling in any form, but I dislike exceedingly the separation of families. I understand that you have lost your negro. I would be pleased to lend you the money to win him back."

"The gentleman accepted the offer. I brought out some new, crisp bills, just from the press, and the game started anew. It was euchre. I soon saw that the gambler could go on winning from the trader all day if he liked, for the former was perpetrating one of the commonest tricks on him—that is, "turning jack." In other words, when he dealt he would always turn up a knave for himself. Seeing this and other cheating, I interfered. I told him that I had learned the game before becoming a clergyman, and insisted on taking the planter's place. Since I was backing the latter he was obliged to yield to me in the matter, which he did with a bad grace.

"I had not only learned the game before becoming a clergyman," but all the tricks that went with it and many other games. I walked into that card sharper in a way that opened his eyes. The negro at stake had followed me into the cabin and was standing watching the game with bulging eyes. It was hard for me to keep a straight face, playing as I was, a supposed minister of the gospel, with counterfeit money and doing as neat bits of thimble-rigging as had ever been practiced on that palatial steamboat. The negro trader was not a professional card sharper, though he didn't hesitate to cheat the planter, and never dreamed that the somber man before him in a spotless white necktie was placing the cards exactly where he wanted them.

"Of course I soon won the dinky for his master. Then I arose from the table, delivered a homily on the sin of gambling and returned to the guards. I was followed by the planter, who said to me:

"'Pe'mit me, suh, to say to yo' that yo're the first man of the cloth that has eber obtained my unbonded respect, suh. Yo' have saved my boy, suh, from being separated from his wife and children, an act fo' which I would have been to blame. I have sufficient influence, suh, to control a call to the First Baptist church of Mississippi. If yo' will accept it it shall be yo's with a fat salary."

"I thanked the gentleman for his offer, but declined it. When we reached his landing he insisted so heartily upon my visiting him at his plantation that I consented.

"I was made welcome by his family, and the wife and children of the negro I had saved from the trader came to the house with tears in their eyes to thank me. I was a good looking young fellow in those days and could see that I made an impression on one of the planter's daughters. I had everything at my disposal to perpetrate any rascality I might choose. I could get the planter's indorsement, which would enable me to dispose of my 'green goods,' and I believed I could win his daughter.

"I did neither. For a brief season I enjoyed the sensation of being a fine fellow. During that time I permitted myself to feel the part just as an actor will feel the character he is personating. Then when it was over I departed, resisting with difficulty the reproachful look of the girl who favored me, and as soon as I was on another boat was again a dog of a counterfeiter."

Ought to Charge Storage. "What is the matter with him?" "He has an idea in his head." "That ought to be a good thing." "No, it isn't."

Embarrassing. "I don't like rich friends." "No?" "I should say not!" "Why?" "They never remember to pay back the money they borrow of you."

Left No Surplus. "Oh, come!" "What?" "Be a good fellow." "Can't." "Why?" "Groceries are too high."

A Simple Safeguard for Mothers. Mrs. D. Gilkerson, 326 Ingles, Ave. Youngtown, Ohio, gained wisdom by experience. "My little girl had a severe cold and coughed almost continuously. My sister recommended Foley's Honey and Tar. The first dose I gave her relieved the inflammation in her throat and after using one bottle her throat and lungs were entirely free from inflammation. Since then I always keep a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar in the house as I know it is a sure cure for coughs and colds." Hills Drug Store.
