"A Stubborn Cinderella" Tonight
With plenty of sympathy and all sorts of prizes wherever they have played the "Stubborn Cinderella" company received this town from Baker City and will play at the Steward tonight. Speaking of the play, the Boise Capital News comments:

That the critics who have pronounced this year's production of "A Stubborn Cinderella" better than that of last season are justified in their statement should be the general verdict of the big audience at the Steward last night. The company is different throughout from that seen here a year ago, and for the most part the change has undoubtedly been for the better. Mr. Gostler has in Hazel Kirby the young prima donna of the company, a real star, whose beauty and grace at once charmed the audience. She possesses a remarkable voice, and when it is considered that she is the youngest prima donna on the stage, her future seems to be assured.

Lillian Goldenh, in the southerly part, is a very clever singer, and is a winsome bit of humanity. She is not much of a vocalist, but is nevertheless well adapted to her part. In the duet with the King, who took the part of "Sessan" also was much applause and went through some new gymnastics that were good. Eddie Wagner was one of the favorites, his appearance being comedy in itself. The support throughout is good, and the very necessary adjunct of musical comedy, the chorus, is composed of young girls admirably cast.

The music of "A Stubborn Cinderella" is too well known to need comment. The song hit is, of course, "When You First Kissed the Last Girl You Loved," which is most effectively rendered by Miss Kirby.

MOSCOW CATHEDRAL.

Fantastic Looking Edifice Erected by Ivan the Terrible.

One of the most extraordinary and fantastic Christian pieces of work in the world is the Cathedral of Moscow, known as Vasil Blagovest, strange not only in outline and conception, but even stranger in its history. It was begun by the architect's name, but the story goes that the man suffered his eyes to be put out directly the church was completed, so that he should never be able to surpass his work. The line of the building was inspired by the wildest and maddest monarch who ever sat on a throne— Ivan the Terrible, czar of Moscow.

The architecture is in every respect extravagant and barbaric, and the coloring is garish in the extreme. It has the shape, modelled by the capricious, mad different and even stranger than the other. The ornamentation is a profusion of a man, a bird is said to have a halcyon in its appearance, and the rest are more or less grotesque. Some are gilt; others are painted in brilliant hues. Indeed, the only description is that it is a nightmare of a church, the fitting legacy of a man who grinded his conscience in trying to gain and control his subjects in barbarism in order that trained dogs might worry and use them to pieces.—Small Magazine.

A King's Hobby.

The late king of Sam had an extraordinary hobby—that of collecting empty matchboxes of all nations. In this connection an interesting story is related. During one of his visits to England the king while passing down Broad Street one afternoon, accompanied by two members of his staff, signed an empty matchbox which had been discarded by its owner and thrown away into the middle of the thoroughfare. Without a moment's thought the monarch dashed into the middle of the crowded traffic, grasped the much coveted treasure and was nearly run over by a passing cab. The fact, however, that he was able to add a new specimen to his collection gathered under such circumstances more than compensated him for the risk which he had run.—London News.
