NEW BOARD IS SELECTED

CLOSING OF YEAR OF M. P. A. MARKED WITH BANQUET.

Merchants Eat Trout, Talk Shop and Vote Their Choice.

E. Polock, F. Halsten, James Snodgrass, Mac Wood, A. S. Geddes, Frank Lilly and Charles Dunn will guide the destinies of the Merchants Protective association for the coming year. This was the edict of the association last evening as it surrounded the banquet table in the Foley hotel.

Almost forty members of the organization were present when Manager Pat Foley of the Foley hotel threw open the dining room doors and announced the banquet. For over an hour the business men feasted on imported trout, Grande Ronde chicken and other delicacies which comprised a very sumptuous menu. When coffee and cigars were reached President J. J. Carr of the association addressed those present with a review of the work done the past year and called attention to the annual election of a new board of directors.

He was followed by C. A. Small secretary of the association. Small in detail told of the work done and he pointed out negligence on the part of some members. He was fearless in his remarks and endeavored to bring each member face to face with conditions that confront the organization.

Quite a number of nominations were made for directors and upon motion it was decided that the seven men receiving the seven largest number of votes should be declared elected. This reduced the voting to one ballot. The above named merchants were those chosen on the board.

James Snodgrass, an officer of the state association, made a short talk on the work done at the state convention. Mr. Brown of White's grocery also talked on local conditions. Many others made short speeches, among them F. D. Halsten who was clear in his remarks about the movement and urged necessary changes and reforms in methods. His speech was given considerable thought by all present.

Silverthorn Hits Key Note.

"Let us as merchants have a better understanding with the general public," said O. E. Silverthorn "At present no one understands the objects of this organization. It is wrong for people to think we are a price setting band of mercantile pirates when such is not the case, and I am very much in favor of throwing open every transaction to the public, inviting in representatives of the Farmers Union to convince them why this association is in existence."

This opinion was universally shared and speeches were made by several supporting the Silverthorn view.

After some time had been spent in general discussion adjournment was taken following a rising vote of appreciation to Mr. Foley for the splendid banquet and excellent service.

To Be Tried for Triple Murder.

Durham, N. C., Feb. 6.—The term of the Granville county court which convened at Oxford today will be made notable by the trial of the negro, Nathan Montague, for the murder of three members of the Sanders family at Hester last December. The alleged victims of the negro were, J. L. Sanders, his 22-year-old daughter, Mary, and his infant granddaughter. The negro is believed to have killed Mr. Sanders and his granddaughter and then to have attacked and finally cut the throat of Miss Mary Sanders, leaving all three bodies in a pool of blood in the house to which he is thought to have set fire. Immediately after his arrest Montague was rushed to the state prison at Raleigh for keeping until his trial.

MORE SUPPLIES ARRIVE

INSTALLATION OF NEW MACHINERY SLOW.

Few Changes in Foundation Plans—Other Railroad News.

Due to the fact that there are needed some additional foundation plans for the new machinery in the new O-W machine shop, the work of setting and placing the machinery ready for action is progressing slowly. Another car load of machinery arrived today and is being unloaded but Division Superintendent Watson is forced to proceed slowly on account of wanted plans for the flooring foundation. The amount and type of the machinery being sent here for installations guarantees the very latest style of shovels when all is in place.

Stock Day Again.

TWO BRIDGES AT HILGARD DONE

RIVER SPANNED BY STEEL STRUCTURES AGAIN.

With Completion of Work Crew Will be Moved to Elgin at Once.

Two modern steel bridges span the Grande Ronde river at Hilgard and at Black Flatt—just below Hilgard—this week. Bridge Superintendent J. F. Campbell last night completed the last of the two that were being put in place this winter and after long months of handicap to traffic at these two points, the highway is now clear. The work has been done substantially and it is doubtful if there will be any floods severe enough to even make an impression on the structure.

Mr. Campbell left this morning for Elgin where another steel bridge is to be built and his crew will be moved down tomorrow or the day after.

MARRIED FIFTY YEARS

MR. AND MRS. M. REYNOLDS WILL COMMEMORATE EVENT.

Fifty Years of Wedded Life to be Celebrated Thursday Afternoon.

One of those rare occurrences designated as golden wedding anniversaries will take place in this city next Thursday when Mr. and Mrs. Merritt Reynolds celebrate that auspicious event. They will be at home from 2 until 5 at their home 1607 Adams avenue.

Lacking but sixteen years of having spent the entire half century of their lives in this valley, Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds have become pioneers of the true blue stamp. A few years ago they retired from active participation in the profession of farming and have made their home in this city.

The event will be very informal; all their friends are invited to attend to mark the momentous event in the lives of these two aged but happy persons.

RICHEST HEIRESS MARRIED.

Robin H. Russell and Frank W. Crownshield.

Following the ushers were the bridesmaids in gowns of white chiffon over white satin, made with the high waisted empire effect and trimmed with festoons of sea green satin ribbon. They were Miss Hope Hamilton, Miss Beatrice Chaffin, Miss Louise Hamilton Randolph and Miss Emilina Cromwell, Miss Allison Pierce, Miss Holmes. Behind the bridesmaids were two little flower girls, little Miss Gloria Gould the bride's youngest sister and Miss Diana Dalziel, Miss Edith Gould, another sister of the bride, followed as maid of honor.

There was a great craning of necks when the bride herself finally appeared, accompanied by her father. Miss Gould looked particularly young and girlish and appeared perfectly unconscious of the interest taken in her finery. She was attired in a magnificent gown of white duchess satin, in semi-empire style, and heavily embroidered with silver roses. The court train was eight yards long and was edged with an embroidery in seed pearls and silver, following the design of a bunch of rose leaves fastened together with a lover's knot. The bridal veil, of Brussels net, was fastened to the coiffure with a trio of orange blossoms. Miss Gould carried a bouquet of orange blossoms and white bride roses.

At the altar the bridesmaids and other attendants separated in a line on either side and the bride and her father passed between them. They were met at the altar steps by Lord Decles and his cousin, Lord Alastair Graham, who acted as best man.

responses clearly and firmly. The ceremony itself occupied but a few moments. Immediately it was concluded the bride and bridegroom returned up the aisle smiling and nodding while receiving the congratulations of relatives and friends.

From the church the bridal party and guests proceeded at once to the Gould residence, 857 Fifth avenue, where the reception was held. The mansion was magnificently decorated for the occasion. The salon on the first floor was adorned with palms, ferns and white roses. The ballroom and the famous "regency room" also were filled with flowers. On the third floor the guests viewed the wedding gifts among which was a profusion of jewels of a total value estimated at close to $1,000,000.

Lord Decles and his bride will spend their honeymoon in California. The latter part of March or early in April they will start for London, where Lord Decles has taken a house for the season and where extensive entertaining is planned during the coronation festivities next June.
