LOVETT DUE OVER THE O-W

INSPECTION MAY NOT LEAD TO LA GRANDE, THOUGH.

Said Heads of Harriman System Will Tour a Portion of the Division.

Judge R. S. Lovett, supreme head of the Harriman lines, Julius Kruttschnitt and the other high officials of the Harriman road now on the Pacific coast, will inspect at least a portion of the Oregon division of the O-W, according to unofficial announcements received here but whether or not the inspection will reach as far as La Grande is doubtful. But the kings of the road travel pretty much impromptu and it would not be surprising if the special train would come to eastern Oregon. The North Bank will be traversed, according to definite advice, and the matter of a union depot at Spokane will also come up for consideration. Because of this fact, it is thought not likely that the galaxy of officials will pass La Grande.

Suspects Released.

murdered man, is in the city today, having come up to consult with Sheriff Rand in regard to the affair.

Mr. McCullough today stated to a representative of the Herald that he was undecided as to whether the crime had been committed by local parties or by strangers. If he could find any motive for local parties doing such a deed, he would believe they were responsible for the crime, as there are peculiar features which indicate local persons.

There is no doubt in the mind of Mr. McCullough but that his son recognized the masked men, or thought he did, and believed the whole affair was a joke. He is convinced that his son was not so reckless as to run the risk of being shot down in cold blood when another man had the drop on him. Thinking it was a fake hold-up, Ed believed the men were trying to get the laugh on him.

DUMAS ORCHARD COURT HOUSERS MAN HERE WIN AGAIN

COMES FROM DAYTON TO INVESTIGATE REPORTS HERE.

Careful Inspection of Imbler Orchards Made by C. I. Dorenberger.

WHAT DUMAS ORCHARD HAS DONE.
During the year just ended this orchard of 94 acres, at Dayton, Washington, produced $90,000 in fruit. To realize this sum the orchard grew 111 carloads of fruit. C. I. Dorenberger has managed the orchard for the past six years.

C. I. Dorenberger, manager of the famous Dumas orchard of 94 acres at Dayton, Wash., accompanied by several extensive orchard land owners and financiers interested in orchard land, is in Grande Ronde valley today passing judgment on the Imbler orchard tracts. Mr. Dorenberger, conceded to be the most successful orchardist in the state of Washington, was called here by continuous reports of high class orchards at Imbler and other sections of the valley, and immediately upon his arrival in the city this morning went on to Imbler to study conditions first hand. What he may class the orchards at when he has inspected them is what is interesting orchard men today.

With the expert were several prominent people of Oregon and Washington. He had with him two men from Dayton and in addition W. A. Laddlaw of Portland. Mr. Laddlaw owns 100 acres of orchard land at Imbler. A Mr. Bryan, also of Portland, was still another orchardist with the visitors.

The reputation of Grande Ronde orchards is rapidly coming to be extensive and commanding the attention of orchard specialists. Effort to have this reputation substantiated was made by several orchardmen today when every tract now growing in and about Imbler was shown to the critic.

BY SAFE MARGIN, THIS TIME, A SITE IS SELECTED.

Construction of New Building Can Now Progress Unmolested.

Union, March 7.—(Special)—What may be said to be the last chapter in the Union schoolhouse site fight came to a conclusion yesterday evening when the vote of the second special election showed the court house site was again the choice of the taxpayers, that site receiving 193 as against 172 for the Hutchinson site. This same issue was voted on two weeks ago by the Union townspeople but the margin in favor of the court house site was so small that it was not legal and another election was ordered on the strength of a ruling of the supreme court.

There is nothing now to prevent the speedy construction of the building, bonds for which have already been floated. It will give Union an up-to-date school building by next fall.
