EUROPE LEADS IN AIR.

France Codifies Aviation Laws and Barristers Keep Posted.

Washington, March 10.—Reports of further astounding achievements in aeronautics are now become nearly routine stories in the record of the world's news. Abroad, the general public has progressed to terms of intimacy with the flying machine that are difficult as yet to appreciate in America. In France there was held recently a convention to consider the codification of special laws to govern the use of the air. Some of the most prominent barristers of Europe were present at that meeting and the possibilities of the use of the aeroplane by criminals, its use in time of war, and the need of precise determination of claims in civil suits in cases of trespass and damage were discussed as present and everyday occurrences. The latest intrusion of the aeroplane comes from England. In the regular service of the church of England and in the Protestant Episcopal church of America, there are prayers especially read in behalf of persons in peril. One of these is for persons in danger through travel by land or sea. The heads of the church of England have now under consideration the advisability of adding to this prayer the words, "and in the air." This question has been placed unofficially before the Episcopal clergy of this country. It is argued that accidents to aviators have now become so frequent that this contingency should receive regular recognition in the prayers of the church.
