"HECKLING" IS PROMISED

Washington, March 15.—(Special)—A policy of "heckling" has been decided upon by republican leaders, as the house minority attitude towards Speaker Champ Clark and the Democrats in the coming extra session.

The rules of the house are full of pitfalls for the unwary. "Uncle Joe" Cannon, as speaker, had to trust himself to Asher C. Hinds at least three or four times a day for parliamentary rulings.

There are two parliamentary experts on the democratic side—Fitzgerald of New York and Sherley of Kentucky—and many other good rules men. Among the republicans there are Hinds, the greatest living authority on the house rules; "Jim" Mann, of Ills. Marlin Olmsted of Pennsylvania, John Dalzell of Pennsylvania, Seno E. Payne of New York, and Cannon himself.

Representative Mann recently gave proof of his parliamentary sagacity by a mysterious filibuster against the omnibus claims bill. A perfectly good majority in the house had to resign itself to Mann's whims. There was no stopping him, and he was always within the rules. He gave the democrats a fair example of what they may expect during their regime at the house. He concluded with a satirical threat for them to be good.

"I think we will have a good deal of fun after April 4," said Mann here today. "Things will begin to happen right off the bat."

Electricians in Session.

St. Paul, Minn., March 15.—The 4th annual convention of the Electrical Association of Minnesota is in session here, with a large attendance of electricians from the principal cities of Minnesota and neighboring states. The delegates devoted the greater part of today to an inspection of the electrical plants of St. Paul and a trip through the sandrock tunnel 60 feet under the surface of the business district of the city.

Helen Gould Saved George.

St. Louis, March 15.—The fact that the Goulds retained control of the Missouri Pacific is attributed today to Miss Helen Gould. It is said she joined forces with Frank Gould and threatened financial war against George if he relinquished his control. Gould thereupon entered into an agreement with Kuhn, Loeb and Rockefeller whereby Gould would retain control.

THE HARDIE TRIPLEX

From Maine to Washington, the Hardie Triplex Sprayer is working successfully. Our model for 1911, shown in the cut above, gives you an idea of the completeness of this machine.

Small details, which tend to perfect it in usefulness and completeness, are carefully looked after. We give you a machine ready to run every minute you need it, doing efficient work for you all the time, and with

Nothing to Watch but the Spray.

Light in weight, compactly built, efficient in every way, don't buy until you see the HARDIE TRIPLEX. Our new catalog is now ready, showing over twenty different styles of hand and power spraying machines, nozzles, hose, etc.

Last spring when looking for a sprayer we looked at all the sprayers on the market and decided on the Hardie as being the machine suitable to our work. Before buying we were told by some that the brass cylinders on the Hardie pump would not last and would be soon eaten up by the action of the spray material. After a season's use we can say that the cylinders are as good as when the machine was taken out. The machine has been exceedingly satisfactory in every respect and has done all you claimed for it. You may use our names as reference at any time.

J. R. Phipps.

The Hardie Triplex Sprayer I purchased this spring has given the best of satisfaction and I do not hesitate in recommending it to every one as the best power sprayer on the market. On account of its low build and light weight it can be taken into orchards where no other power sprayer would go without tearing the trees and knocking off the fruit.

I have not paid out one cent for repairs this year.
