AUTOISTS GO TO BOISE

MR. AND MRS. BIGGERS AND PARTY TO SEE AVIATION.

On Before Storm Broke, Tourists Evidently Meet Discomfort.

Getting under way before the storm broke today, Dr. and Mrs. Biggers and Jay Van Buren were off in the Biggers' Franklin this morning with Boise as the destination. Aside from enjoying the exhilarating ride which good weather would afford, the party doubtless had to experience some disagreeably cold rain storm if the weather along the route was similar to that which marked the forenoon in the Grande Ronde valley.

The Boise aviation meet opening tomorrow will be witnessed by the party before their return home.

It was thought this morning here that Mrs. Biggers would take the train from Baker on account of the disagreeable climatic condition.

Hornby was but twenty-two when he was made secretary of the American legation at Berlin.

Hornby was very popular in society, though, not having a fortune, he was rather sought by married women coveting attention than young girls angling for a husband. Among these wives who interested themselves in the young diplomat was Mme. Berthalow, the wife of a Parisian financier. At that time the world was stirred by the Morocco affair, and it was feared there would be a war between France and Germany. M. Berthalow was in Berlin endeavoring to secure the first news in case the emperor decided to go to war for speculative purposes.

One evening at a court ball Mme. Berthalow, seeing Hornby pass, called him to her on some pretext and later, while hanging on his arm, said to him:

"Mr. Hornby, do you think there will be war?"

"I don't think about such things."

"I am sure if war is declared you will know it before it is made public."

"Why do you think that?"

"Because I have been told that before going to war the emperor must know how the other powers will act, and your government is now one of the powers. The American minister will be able to judge if there is to be war and will inform his government. What he knows you know."

Hornby smiled without making any reply. The lady spoke of other matters and finally said:

"I presume all important dispatches are in cipher."

"They are."

"What is the word for 'war' in your cipher code?"

"Oh, it wouldn't do for me to tell you that."

"Please tell me that one word. I'll not divulge it."

"Well, on your promise, I'll tell you. It is 'woman.'"

"Good gracious! Why was that word chosen?"

"I don't know. I didn't make the code."

"And what is the word for 'peace'?"

"Man."

"Upon my word! I should have supposed those two words would have been reversed."

"Perhaps that's the reason of their use as they are. They are not so easily deciphered."

Mme. Berthalow looked up into the young man's face. It was as guileless as a May morning. She continued her investigations.

"Our family have an old claim against the United States, dating back a hundred years or more, for a vessel owned by my great-grandfather, destroyed by an American privateer. I should like you to advise me concerning it."

"I shall be happy to do so. I am at my office from 11 to 6 every day, where it will be proper for you to call."

This was not satisfactory to Mme. Berthalow. She would have preferred to have the young man call upon her where she could talk with him in secret, but on second thought she considered that there would be an advantage in going to his office. She might light on some information not intended for her. The next day at 12 o'clock she appeared at the legation.

"Ah, madame," Hornby said, "we are very busy today, and I fear I shall have to keep you waiting. If you will go into my private office for awhile I shall be happy to advise you presently concerning your claim."

He ushered her into a cozy room in the center of which stood a table with writing materials and papers scattered about. Mme. Berthalow, being alone in the room, made a hurried examination of the papers. One of them bore evidence of having just been written. It was marked to be sent by cable to the secretary of state at Washington. The lady eagerly seized it and ran her eye over it. There was a jumble of words the meaning of which was unintelligible to her, but she noticed scattered throughout the dispatch the word "woman." It occurred five times. She had all the time been needed for the examination—indeed, more than she wished, for she was anxious to get away that she might impart the information to her husband that there was to be war.

Presently Hornby came in and informed her that he was ready to listen to the matter of her claim. She told him she had left home without having locked up the jewels she had worn the night before and must return at once. Hornby gave her one of his engaging smiles and saw her to her carriage.

When Hornby returned to his office he threw the cipher telegram into the wastebasket and wrote one to a broker in Paris announcing that a prominent financier would probably "sell the market." If so it would break, and the broker was to buy largely for Hornby's account.

Hornby by the operation made a fortune. Some time after this Mme. Berthalow said to him:

"Are you sure that in your cipher code 'woman' stands for 'war'?"

"It does not now. You convinced me that its use thus was ungalant, and I arranged for its being changed to mean 'peace.'"
