The sound of the saw and hammer is a regular thing in La Grande these days.

Although the material is wood, apparently the express company's new building will add to the appearance of things around the railroad station. As soon as the exhibit hall is removed it will be possible to get a better view of the new building.

Beating horses will not be a pleasant thing to follow if the women of the city once get stirred up over the matter.

Somebody Galloway admits that Florida is a fine place in winter but somehow he still thinks Elgin and vicinity suits him better than the tropical southland. He always did like apples better than bananas, anyway.
