CURTISS WRITES OF TRIAD

DESCRIBES MACHINE TO BE USED AT ASTORIA.

Machine Built for Use on Land or Sea With Equal Safety.

Astoria, April 25.—(Special)—Glenn Curtiss has written a special description of his monster hydro-aeroplane which is a fly at the Astoria centennial during the third week of the pageant. This is the first time Mr. Curtiss has written about his combined motor boat and airship. His description follows:

(Written by Glenn Curtiss.)

The hydro-aeroplane is the newest and most sensational thing in aviation. I developed it from the standard Curtiss aeroplane at San Diego, Cal., during the past winter, and it is heralded by the experts in aerial navigation as the greatest advancement since man first learned to fly.

This new wonder of the air is popularly called "The Triad," meaning the union of three. It takes this name from the fact that it represents the conquest of three elements—air, water and earth.

The Triad can fly sixty miles an hour, skim the water like a racing motor boat at fifty miles an hour, and run over the earth at 35 miles an hour. It can rise from the earth and alight upon the water; start from the water and come down upon the land, or be used exclusively on either land or water.

A flight by the Triad from the water is far more spectacular than a flight by the ordinary aeroplane. To see it skim the water like a swooping gull and then rise into the air, circle and soar to great heights, and finally to drop gracefully down upon the water again, furnishes a thrill and inspires a wonder that does not come with any other sport on earth.

The hydro-aeroplane is safer than the ordinary aeroplane. For this reason it is bound to become the most popular of all aerial craft. The beginner can take it out on his neighboring lake or river or even the great bays, and skim it over the water until he is sure of himself and sure that he can control it in the air. He can fly it six feet above the water for any distance with the feeling that even if something should happen to cause a fall, he would not be dashed to pieces. The worst he would get is a cold bath.

The Triad is destined to be the greatest factor in the development of aviation. It makes long cross-country or cross-sea flights possible. If a cross country flight is too dangerous to attempt because of the rough character of the land, the hydro-aeroplane can follow a river course with perfect safety. Or if there is no water course and the country is level it can take the land course with equal safety.

In short, it matters little whether an aerial course takes one over land or water, the hydro-aeroplane is the safest machine for flight. With the Triad the great lakes offer no impassable obstacle to a long flight, and it is within the vision of him who watches the trend of things, that an over-sea flight is not far in the future.
