AN ILL MATED PAIR.

Wide Apart in Temperament Were Thomas and Jane Carlyle.

That the Carlyles were an ill assorted couple no one could deny. She was a highly strung, nervous woman, very quick, able and impatient, disappointed with her married life and her position, jealous of the admiration which Carlyle received at the hands of all his admirers, especially of one or two women, whom she found very unsympathetic.

That Carlyle adored her there is little doubt. He loved her with all the rough, passionate power of his nature, but he was a peasant in manner and character and lacking in all the little outward signs of devotion and affection which so many women exact and the absence of which they resent most bitterly.

Mrs. Carlyle found herself tied to an irritable genius who, sensitive at every point, deeply devoted to her, but absolutely incapable of translating that love into the language which she craved and longed for. I remember her once saying to me in a bitter way, "My dear, whatever you do, never marry a philosopher," and that was the key to the enigma—the woman always hungering for proofs of the devotion in which the whole of her daily life was wanting.—From Lady St. Heller's "Memories."

Physiognomy Not Reliable.

I am a profound disbeliever in physiognomy. Features are false witnesses. Stupidity frequently wears a mask of intelligence. I know business men who look like poets and poets who look like business men. Men of genius invariably look like idiots, and if you pick out the man who looks most eminent in a party you are sure to find he is a nobody. I always distrust men who look magnificent. Nature is a stingy creature. She seldom gives a man the double gift of being great and looking great. She took care to lame Byron and deform Pope and disfigure Johnson. But the crowning example of her jealous parsimony is Shakespeare. I have always been disappointed with Shakespeare's face. It does not live up to his poetry. It is dull, heavy and commonplace.—From "Adventures in London."

Switchmen's Union Flourishes.

St. Paul, Minn., May 15.—With an attendance of several hundred delegates from many parts of the United States and Canada the biennial convention of the Switchmen's union of North America met in the old state capitol building here today, to remain in session about two weeks. President Hawley presided at the opening session, which was devoted entirely to routine business. While there is a great deal of business to come before the delegates, it is said that nothing of a revolutionary nature is anticipated at the convention. The annual report to be presented by Secretary M. P. Welch shows a steady gain in the membership of the organization and a full recovery from the losses sustained in the recent strike in the northwest. In connection with the convention the Woman's Auxiliary also began its biennial meeting today. The president of the auxiliary is Mrs. Barbara Staas of Duluth.
