POISONED BAITS TO KILL BUGS

Oregon Agricultural College Expert Tells How to Protect Gardens.

Corvallis, Ore., May 25.—"Poisoned baits are desirable for destroying the grasshoppers, cutworms, and a few other insects," says H. F. Wilson, entomologist at the Oregon Agricultural College, in a new bulletin on insecticides for the garden, which will soon be off the press.

"Such baits are most effective if used early in the spring," he says. "Poisoned slices of tomatoes or similar vegetables treated with a strong solution of arsenate of lead or Paris green are used to poison sow-bugs and wire-worms.

"To make a bran arsenate mash, mix thoroughly a pound of white arsenic, half a pound of brown sugar, and six pounds of bran, and add water enough to make a wet mash. A spoonful should be placed at the base of each tree or vine. For cut-worms a still better bait may be prepared by mixing thoroughly a pound of Paris green, and 15 pounds of bran, dry, and sowing it broadcast upon the vegetation, about the borders of cultivated fields or gardens. It may also be sowed with a seed drill along the rows of plants to be protected. So used it should be found especially valuable for destroying cut-worms in onion fields."

Doan's Kidney Pills relieved all these difficulties and restored my kidneys to a normal condition."
