SCRAMBLED EGGS FROM KALAMAZOO.

(Copyrighted, 1911, by Will Brownell.)
We are as full of polley as a dog is of fleas. There are nine men on the fence looking around for a soft place to light, to one on the ground ready to be counted.

Play this on your harmonica—some time, somewhere, these our thoughts of today will happily seek us out, bringing comfort and great peace, or, perchance, slimy and cold, they will enshroud us, damning us with their horrid recollections.

No man impresses us with his importance by simply screwing on a long face and assuming a dignified manner. Owls, also, have somehow acquired the habit of looking wise.

We like companionship; we like men, but there is an occasional one who gets on our nerves. He not only gets on our nerves temporarily, but he also thoroughly spoils our entire day if we happen to meet up with him in the morning. Every morning when we leave our home for our work, we look up the street hoping to see Frank, Henry or Bill coming, because then we know we shall have a delightful walk and a pleasant chat on the way down to our office. One of these is a professional man and he is making money so fast he doesn't even take the time to count it. Another is a manufacturer employing hundreds of men and doing a thriving business, while the third is a day laborer, a man who whatever he may have earned, has never received in all of his long life more than two dollars a day as pay for his services. One of these men, the day laborer, is a natural common-sense optimist, while the other two have been obliged more or less to train and push themselves along in this direction. These men, to my certain knowledge, have their troubles even as you and I. The professional man and the manufacturer have in their history experienced business reverses which not only depleted their purses, but also tried their manhood. The laborer has at times been out of employment and if you have not experienced it, you can at least imagine what enforced idleness even for a limited period means to a two-dollar-a-day man with a large family. Why do I like to meet these men; why do I like to walk and talk with them? Because they do me good. Their minds are clean; they are hopeful and helpful. They believe in God; they believe in man. Two are rich and one is poor in this world's goods, but all three are equally rich in the possession of minds and hearts which think and beat for others as well as themselves. They have their faults, otherwise we should not like them, but with their faults they are the kind of men we like to walk with.

Take a Kodak with you

We say "Kodak" advisedly. We do not merely mean camera, but the particular make of camera that bears the Eastman trademark "Kodak." The satisfactory results that it has given to our customers justify us in specifying "Kodak."

Your vacation will mean more to you, if you Kodak. Not only more pleasure at the time, but afterward, the added pleasure that will come from the pictures.

Let us show you how simple it all is by the Kodak system. Our stock is very complete and we are always glad to give photographic advice to any amateur.
