LOT OF FUN AT MATINEE

BATHING HOUSES GOT ABOUT $100 YESTERDAY.

Youngsters Have Serious Time Winning From Old Timers.

Slightly over $100 was provided for the proposed bathing houses at Riverside park through the medium of a funny ball game yesterday afternoon at the Lincoln grounds when the ALL Stars, a young aggregation, defeated the old reliable business men who laid claims to distinction a few years ago but have outgrown some of their usefulness in the diamond dot late, final score 9 to 5. It was not a one-sided game by any means and but for a bad moment or two the youngsters were crowded closely. Francis, a necktie county superintendent, and who cannot be sized up in the old men's category exactly, led off for the business men and hit the first thing that Blythstone offered; following him came such sluggers as Williams, et al. Really it was a right smart game, mixed up with plenty of hitting and a little error here and there but on the whole a fairly good game. Then the grand stand proved itself a gridiron club and handed out encouragement carte blanche.

The business men held their own until the last when the youngsters forged ahead.

Notes of the Game.

Sherwood Williams threw for the business men for four innings and did it well, too. However, the business men trotted out a blackhorse who had the youngsters on his hip. It was C. P. Ferrin and without any practice, he threw a mighty fine game. He can't sign his name today, though. He fanned man after man with two or three severe offerings.

Herman Seigrist came back to old time form as backstop but was too scared of messing up his new overalls to do any base running.

William Miller, complimentary dubbed grandpa and a few other such more or less appropriate handles, engineered the first station with the same form that pleased the fans when he was the initial sacker back in 1891 when the first league was organized in La Grande.

Jay Van Buren, an old time first bagger, took the keystone yesterday and though he was too fat to grab any ground throws he figured in a half dozen assists and got an unassisted putout when he chased Geddes all around the playground finally tagging him out by falling on the runner. It was no effort to get the "out" after that, but Van showed some late sprinting abilities.

Lut. Dunn left his laundry wagon long enough to get a score or two. He was there on the sliding and fielded pretty well, too.

Francis, just breaking into fast company, was ruffled by the presence of so many ladies in the grand stand, and didn't field with as much success as he hit the pill.

In the field Cleaver covered the left garden for a while, being displaced by Hill, the real estate dealer. Both of them ran themselves tired.

Irwin, the dispatcher and Heath and Williams who took the right garden after the fourth, had plenty of fun getting acquainted with the sun and got some of the flies.

Cleaver forgot to touch third after a long fly was caught in the garden and though four or five tried to lasso him he had to be called out on the misplay.

Bohnenkamp distinguished himself by going after and getting a long fly; then, soon after he got over the fence into left field territory and spit teeth after colliding with Elsworth, who had taken Ralston's place.

Campbell, a former Seattleite covered first base the last two innings but Blythstone hung one on him the only time at bat.

"Dad" Irwin pulled off a good play by catching a difficult foul.

Pidcock was the most consistent player for the youngsters.

Not a single business man was dressed like the other fellow.

The score by innings:

Bathers 3 0 1 3 0 0 2 0 x—8

Business Men ... 3 0 1 0 1 0 0 0—5

The line-up at the beginning of the

Lighting Economy

Is it economy to strain your eyes using a dim yellow light that smokes and flickers.

Is it economy to run the terrible risk—fire and explosion—that is ever present when coal oil lamps are used?

These are not economies; they are dangers.

Electricity furnishes a cool steady light, that leaves the air pure; that won't flicker, and can't explode. All you need to do is press the button, and it's ready any time.

When your health, comfort, and peace of mind are taken into consideration, ELECTRIC LIGHT IS CHEAPER.
