NOT A TYRANT.

Side by side with our helpless officialdom has grown up the tremendous structure of modern incorporated business. There is nothing inefficient in that development. Its wealth is limitless and increasing; its organization has the perfection of the machine; its ministers spring to their tasks endowed with the best specialized training that science can give them. The result of contact between the two can have but one issue, and the people, instead of looking at the executive as a possible tyrant, as Jefferson did, look upon him to protect the individual citizen against the oppression of this unofficial power of business. It is not the people who are in danger from a strong state government. It is the government itself that is in danger from private interests.—Henry L. Stimson.

SENTENCE SERMONS.

A man must stand erect, not be kept erect by others.—Marcus Aurelius.

If God writes "opportunity" on one side of the open door he writes "responsibility" on the other side.—Dr. Gracey.

And he who waits to have his task marked out
Shall die and leave his errand unfulfilled.
—Lowell.

Perfection of character can be achieved only through struggle, through discipline. It is for him that overcometh that the crown of life is reserved.—John Fiske

Though we travel the world over to find the beautiful, we must carry it with us or find it not.—Emerson.

BUSINESS PROSPECTS.

Wall street may be blue, but fundamental conditions are very sound everywhere. The banks are all strong in cash. In fact, the majority of them have too much money. For the past four years the policy has been to curtail, retrench, weed out the bad from the good and economize in general. The result has been the placing of the finances of the country on a sounder basis and the strengthening of the general business situation. Business is ready to go ahead as soon as the country is released from its bondage of political agitation. One of the great troubles is that we have too many politicians who lack the business training necessary to safe and sound legislation.—John W. Gates.

DICKENS' EPIGRAMS.

When a man bleeds inwardly it is a dangerous thing for himself, but when he laughs inwardly it bodes no good to other people.—Pickwick

There are quiet victories, great sacrifices of self and noble acts of heroism done every day in nooks and corners and in little households and in men's and women's hearts.—"Battle of Life"

Annual income twenty pounds, annual expenditure nineteen pounds six, result happiness; annual income twenty pounds, annual expenditure twenty pounds naught and six, result misery. The blossom is blighted; the leaf is withered; the god of day goes down upon the dreary scene.—Micawber.

JAPAN IS FRIENDLY.

Nothing astounds me more than the feelings that prevail in regard to Japan and our republic. If ever there were two nations that not only should live at peace with each other, but which should be sincerely attached to each other, it is Japan and the republic, and I can testify from my visit to Japan that the feeling there is what it should be, strong and sympathetic.—Andrew Carnegie

VALUE OF PUBLICITY.

It is an encouraging sign that so much is being spoken, written and thought about bribery, which is the curse of a country. Progress has begun whenever a community has become conscious of an evil and is sensitive about it. Those are not the best times when the least is said about a crime. Silence may mean a blunted conscience, a low standard of judgment, or it may indicate despair. Let the agitation go on. Let the pulpit and platform resound with strong invectives and powerful appeals. Let the press in heavy headlines arouse public indignation, and let the children speak of it at school. Let the fathers discuss it at the family table, and let the mothers voice their righteous wrath. Let bribery be painted in its blackest colors, and let the denunciation be directed against him that gives as well as him that takes the bribe.—Rev. Joseph Stolz

DIVORCE EVILS.

There is a social scourge more blighting and more destructive of family life than Mormonism. It is the fearfully increasing number of divorce mills throughout the United States. These mills, like the mills of the gods, are slowly but surely grinding to powder the domestic altars of the nation. I can conceive no scene more pathetic or one that appeals more touchingly to our sympathies than the contemplation of a child emerging into the years of discretion feeling her father and mother estranged from each other. Her little heart is yearning to love. She longs to embrace both parents, but she finds that she cannot give her affection to the one without exciting the resentment or displeasure of the other.—Cardinal Gibbons.

KEEP YOUR TEMPER.

Happy those who have a lyre in their heart and music in their minds which their actions perform.—Joseph Joubert.

Anger is as a stone cast into a wasps' nest.—Malabar Proverb.

I think the first virtue is to restrain the tongue. He approaches nearest to the gods who knows how to be silent even when he is in the right.—Cato.

Most of the shades of life are produced by standing in our own sunshine.—Emerson.

Grand Forks to Have Water Filtered.
The new rapid sand filter which has been in the course of construction since early last fall for the city of Grand Forks, N. D., has been completed, and official tests are now in operation. It is expected that the city will accept the plant, and the citizens will again have pure drinking water after being without it for more than four months.

WISDOM OF TEMPERANCE.

The excessive use of intoxicating liquor is the cause of a great deal of the poverty, degradation and crime of the world, and one who abstains from the use of such liquor avoids a dangerous temptation. Abraham Lincoln showed that he believed this in writing out for his boy friends the pledge of total abstinence so often quoted. Each person must determine for himself the course he will take in reference to his tastes and appetites, but those who exercise the self restraint to avoid altogether the temptation of alcoholic liquor are on the safe and wiser side.—President Taft

IMAGINATION.

And as imagination bodies forth
The forms of things unknown
The poet's pen
Turns them to shapes and gives
To airy nothing
A local habitation and a name.
Such tricks has strong imagination.
That if he would but apprehend
Some joy
It comprehends some bringer of that joy.
—Shakespeare.

Siam's New King Will Establish Schools Like Those In America

King Chulalongkorn of Siam, who has been on the throne only a few weeks, is reported to have taken steps to establish schools in his country that will offer to all his young subjects a chance to get an education. He intends to develop a system of schools modeled on that of the United States, which he studied closely when he visited this country a few years ago, when he was the crown prince. The king himself is a graduate of England's famous Oxford university. He speaks several languages fluently, has written books and plays and is altogether progressive. When he was but a boy he saw a typewriter for the first time, and he immediately ordered one. He became an expert operator and, if necessary, could earn his living running the machine. At his suggestion the manufacturers made typewriters with Siamese characters, and they were soon in general use in Bangkok and other Siamese cities. King Chulalongkorn is twenty-nine years old. He is a close student of military affairs and is familiar with the tactics and systems in vogue in England and Germany. His father, the late King Chulalongkorn, was more progressive than his predecessors and paved the way for the reforms that his son is expected to introduce.
