PERJURY SYNDICATE WATCHED.

Organization Has Long Made Turkish Justice a Joke.

Constantinople, June 7.—The authorities are trying to get at the truth concerning the operation of a regularly organized perjury syndicate which, under both the Hamidian and the present regime, has made Turkish justice a joke for years past. Investigators of the organization are not troubled by too little but by too much evidence. Every member of the society is ready to turn state's evidence. Being professional perjurers, however, there is naturally considerable hesitancy concerning the acceptance of their testimony.

The syndicate consisted of pensioned officials of the Constantinople courts. Having had extensive experience in posts of trust the members were able to furnish, not unintelligent perjury, but just the right kind for any particular case and of a nature appropriate to the peculiarities of different juries and trial judges. The business was so extensive that the management was able to offer very reasonable rates. Divorce testimony cost the most, two medjidiehs, or $1.60, being charged for each witness in such case.

The syndicate's disruption resulted from a quarrel among the members concerning a division of the profits.
