SEARCH FOR PARTNER ON

CRATER LAKE VICTIM'S BODY IS SEARCHED FOR.

Well Known Eastern Oregon Man's Body Hunted for at Crater.

Medford, Ore., July 27.—J. W. Stephenson has gone to Crater lake where he will assist in further search for the body of B. B. Bakowski, the lost photographer.

Mr. Stephenson is the partner of the missing man and was on the scene last winter, soon after Bakowski disappeared but at that time nothing could be done toward seeking the body. While it will be difficult now to make a thorough search owing to the snow under the rim of the crater, Mr. Stephenson, Superintendent Arant and Head Ranger Momyer will immediately make another thorough search so far as it is possible. Mr. Stephenson feels the loss of his former chum and partner in business ventures keenly and he will go to the lake with the avowed intention of not returning until the body is located and removed from its snowy grave.

It may be possible to find the body weeks before it can be located. Already Superintendent Arant and Ranger Momyer have made some effort to locate the body but to date nothing has come of this. In fact no evidence of where the missing man had been after he left his camp this side of the rim has been found other than the finding of the snow shoes and glove by Walter J. McDonald a logger who crossed the mountain from this side to Medford during the early spring. These were found just to the right of the road leading from the government headquarters to the rim and it is believed that near this spot is where the unfortunate man went over. Mr. Arant states that it will be several weeks before the snow will be sufficiently gone at this point down under the rim to admit of a search that could possibly be thorough.

Mr. Stephenson expects to spare no effort or expense in trying to locate the body of Bakowski and it is expected that his efforts will prove successful within the next few weeks.

RARE WRECK AT SPARKS

RAILROADING MARVELS AT LACK OF INJURIES.

Nine Coaches Leave Track Still No Passengers Suffer.

San Francisco, July 27.—(Special)—In these days of modern railroad equipment, where the traveler is protected at almost every turn of the track by some new device, it is apparent that the transportation companies of the country have come to recognize the truthfulness of the maxim that it is better to avoid losses than to incur the expensive luxury of law suits. These may not mean any eventual loss in the way of damages, but they do mean publicity, in which the traveling public takes an abiding interest.

One of the best testimonials of the efficient equipment of the Southern Pacific company is found in the report of an accident that occurred on the night of June 24, 1911, in the vicinity of Sparks, Nevada. The affair was one of these events which cannot be guarded against when a broken rail snapped with the impact of the train as it passed over the weak spot. Just think! Nine coaches left the track and not a single soul was injured. Such an accident three years ago would have meant a catastrophe of sufficient magnitude to arouse the entire world with another recital of horrors.

The accident at Sparks is one that has not been duplicated in the United States, and the freedom from fatalities is due to the excessive care exercised by the operating and all other departments which have to do with the handling of passenger business. This vigilance explains the immunity of the Southern Pacific and its allied lines from serious accidents. Steel trains coupled up on the vestibule plan form scrolls that penetrate space without regard to obstacles. In addition, when these meteors of the railroad world are further secured by the block signal system and countless other checks against the forgetfulness of human nature, the traveler may rely upon that particular system as the one best bet of his life.

THE DRINKS AT JOSEPH.

Water in Litigation, and Why Drink It?

One Joseph man gives an excuse for imbibing in liquor, and other concoctions. He says the city water system is in litigation and no self-respecting citizen wants to do anything to get mixed in a law suit therefore he deems it unsafe to drink water from the hydrant, because in so doing a man might convert himself into a witness capable of giving expert testimony. And while the litigation is pending it is therefore considered permissible to drink a beverage, the kind to be selected by the individual whose thirst is going to be slaked.

DEFENDS NATIVE STATE.

Dr. McKennon Has a Fine Opinion of Arkansas.

An amusing conversation took place last evening between J. D. McKennon and his brother, Dr. A. M. McKennon, who, with his wife and mother, is visiting the McKennons of this valley. J. D. was telling of the great Oregon country and was belittling the state of Arkansas. To say the meaneast thing he could think of naturally the chills and fever were mentioned.

"Doctor knows that for over 20 years I chilled every day or every third day. Why, I could go back to Arkansas now and in two days' time sit on the sunny side of the house and have a chill that would make my teeth sound like one of these automobiles with the gear busted."

After this remark had been made J. D. walked to hear what Dr. McKennon would have to say. Addressing his remarks to the writer the doctor said in a low even tone and with agitation, "You see, it is like this in the state of Arkansas. No one but the extremely shiftless people have chills. A man who is good for anything at all never chills for he has something else to do. But any time you see one who likes to fiddle or one who likes to fish and occasionally one who likes to trade horses, just so sure you will see one who chills every other day or every third."

J. D. listened attentively and the doctor would have gotten off without argument had he left out the horse trader, but after mentioning that there was a brotherly argument on state, climate and crops that would have done the Arkansas publicity bureau good to hear.
