The Isthmian THEATRE

"The Love of Summer Morn"..... Kalem
A beautiful Indian love story. Tragic in its finale, with "Summer Morn," a chief's daughter, sacrifices her life and love in the tribal sacred spring. A magnificent picture.
"Winter Sports at Lucerne"..... Pathe
Last winter's carnival fully depicted.
"Barriers Burned Away"..... Vitagraph
Two brothers, two wives and two children. An unhappy quarrel and eventually the barriers are burned away. A striking Vitagraph production.
"The Accomplice"..... Pathe
A magnificent drama holding the audience tense and spell bound until the finish. A Pathe special.
"Two Overcoats"..... Vitagraph
A fine comedy. Vitagraph comedy has a reputation all its own. This is no exception.
Illustrated song—"When We Listen to the Chime of the Old Church Bell," sung by Miss Garrick.

That's the Kind all Women Have Who Use Parisian Sage.

If you are a woman and really desire to have hair that fascinates and compels admiration then you want a bottle of Parisian Sage.

Women who use Parisian Sage never need to be ashamed of their hair because it not only causes hair to grow profusely but it puts life and lustre into it.

Of course it's splendid, also for men and boys and girls, and it's rightly guaranteed to banish dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks, or money back. Parisian Sage is a delightful hair dressing and every member of the family should use it regularly. Large bottles 50 cents at the Newlin drug store and druggists everywhere.

The Weaker Sex.
The young woman had spent a busy day.

She had browbeaten fourteen sales people, bullied a floorwalker, argued victoriously with a milliner, laid down the law to a modiste, nipped in the bud a taxi chauffeur's attempt to overcharge her, made a street car conductor stop the car in the middle of a block for her, discharged her maid and engaged another and otherwise refused to allow herself to be imposed upon.

Yet she did not smile that evening when a young man begged: "Let me be your protector through life"—Life.

New Angle on Help.
"Why did you inquire so particularly into the wardrobe of that girl you just hired?" asked one of two women who were leaving an employment agency. "To find out how carefully she will guard against burglars," said the other. "My experience has been that a girl who has nice things of her own will lock up more securely at night and keep a sharper eye out for sneak thieves in the daytime than one who has nothing of value to lose."—New York Press.

She Was Right.
"How exquisitely sweet that Mrs. Blondy is to you, Jonesey," said Witherell. "What's up? Any tender little romance there?"

"No, indeed. Why, that woman hates me," said Jonesey. "She doesn't show it," said Witherell. "No, but she knows that I know how old she is. We were both born on the same day," said Jonesey. "and she's afraid I'll tell somebody."—Harper's Weekly.

The First Lighthouse.
The first lighthouse was erected at Pharos, near Alexandria, in Egypt. It was built in 285 B. C. Its height was 550 feet, and the light, which was kept burning on top at night, was visible forty-one miles away. This tower existed for some 1,600 years, when it was destroyed by an earthquake.

The Idea.
"Can a married man acquire happiness?"
"Sure! You don't think that bachelors are the only ones that die, do you?"—Toledo Blade.

Generally.
"Pa," said Freddy, "what is a social scale?"
"Generally speaking," replied pa, "it's a place where they weigh money."

There is an oblique way of reproof which takes off from the sharpness of it.—Steele.

RAILWAYS IN JAPAN.

Filthy Cars and Dirty Stations in a Land of Cleanliness.

"The railway journey from Kioto to Yokohama, despite the fact that most beautiful country is traversed, is not the pleasantest of experiences," declares a writer in the Wide World. "One buys a railway ticket in Japan in installments."

"The ordinary ticket only enables one to go by a train covering the minimum distance in the maximum time, so an extra express ticket is purchased, which means that the engine moves a little more quickly toward its appointed goal."

"Next a platform ticket must be procured to enable one to board the train, and finally one has to fight one's way into a first class carriage. Why do all the passengers in Japan take their luggage into the already painfully small carriage instead of leaving it in the van? And why, again, does a nation that is a passport for cleanliness the world over possess a train service so shockingly dirty in every detail?"

"We once in a weak moment looked into a station master's room at a large station, and for pure dirt it could have given points to a dust heap. In the train carriages the floors are covered with the dirt of ages, cigarette ends, orange peel, sandwich papers. At intervals a porter saunters in with a brush and leisurely sweeps all the refuse into a corner, having first carelessly closed every window, so that no atom of discomfort or infection shall be lost."

"Finally he departs, leaving behind him the rubbish and an atmosphere charged with germs and angry words. Truly a Japanese porter's definition of clearing up is removing rubbish from one place to another."

A TURKEY FEAST.

General Lee Showed His Officers the Way to Enjoy It.

General Lee in the drawing room was a dignified and quiet gentleman, very kindly and gentle, especially with women and children. "On the field," says Major Ranson in Harper's Magazine, "he was the general, the commander in all essential points. But in other points he could be as sympathetic and considerate as he was at home."

"In the latter part of December a barrel was delivered at our camp marked 'General Lee and Staff.' We opened it and found it was packed full of turkeys. We sent word to General Lee, and he rode over to our camp. There was snow on the ground, and we had laid the turkeys out on a board on the snow, the biggest in the middle and the others jarring off to the smallest at each end. There were about a dozen of them."

"General Lee dismounted and joined the group gathered round the present, carrying his unslung and undrawn sword in his hand. He was told that the big turkey in the middle was his. He stood looking down at the turkeys for a moment and then said, touching the big turkey with the scabbard of his sword:

"This, then, is my turkey? I don't know, gentlemen, what you are going to do with your turkeys, but I wish mine sent to the hospital in Petersburg so that some of the convalescents may have a good dinner."

"He then turned on his heel and, walking to his horse, mounted and rode away. We looked at one another for a moment and then, without a word, replaced the turkeys in the barrel and sent them to the hospital."

Gilbert's Witty Comment.

Sir W. S. Gilbert's wit and humor were always ready. He was a fine raconteur and a good after dinner speaker. Rutland Barrington, the old Savoyard, said that "staying in Gilbert's house was like living in a literary fireworks factory."

Barrington played the Captain in "Pinafore." At rehearsal one day Gilbert, who was an autocratic and magnificent stage manager, told him to cross the stage, which represented the deck of H. M. S. Pinafore, and sit on a skylight "in a positive attitude." Barrington obeyed orders, but unfortunately the skylight had only been rigged up temporarily, and the portly Barrington crashed through it.

"That's an expensive attitude," said Gilbert in a flash.

Wanted to Convert Utopia.

When the "Utopia" was first published it occasioned a pleasant mistake. This political romance represents a perfect but visionary republic in an island supposed to have been somewhere in the Atlantic, near these western shores.

"As this was the age of discovery," says Granger, "the learned Budaeus and others took it for genuine history and deemed it expedient to send missionaries thither to convert the people."—"Book of Queer Things."

Men Are Beacons.

Every man is the center of perpetual radiation like a luminous body. He is, as it were, a beacon which entices a ship upon the rocks if it does not guide it into port.—Amiel.
