EXPLAIN NEEDS TO MR. FISHER

SECRETARY OF INTERIOR WILL BE SHOWN DATA.

When Fisher Reaches Oregon, State's Needs Will Be Shown Him.

Oregon's needs and right in federal reclamation work will be presented to Secretary of the Interior Fisher when he reaches here August 13. Although he plans to remain but three hours, being en route to Alaska for an inquiry into the coal situation, that time will be utilized by local business interests to impress upon the secretary of the Interior their conviction that this state has been grievously wronged in apportioning the reclamation fund, and that the opportunity has not yet passed to correct the wrong, says the Portland Telegram.

It is found that while the president's apportionment of the funds now on hand and to accrue through sales of bonds from sale of public lands, and from installment payments of the reclaimed areas, has been advertised as semi-final, it is clear that the secretary of the interior and the president have broad latitude. If these two officials desire, they will have command of enough margin to give Oregon her dues. From the fact that the present arrangements of the reclamation service contemplate work on a considerable scale at Umatilla only, in taking up the west unit if the preliminary surveys warrant, business men here believe that the secretary should be shown in a conclusive way that there are other immense areas which could be reached if the reclamation service would survey them. It also appears that very limited work is to be pressed at Klamath, which could within the meaning of the loan law and the policy of the administration be easily made the scene of great activities.

When Secretary Fisher is here it is believed that he can be impressed better than through the state delegation at Washington. Prominent business men will meet him and utilize the time right. Since the West Umatilla to the limit in presenting Oregon's tension has not been formally accepted yet, that will be one of the first topics taken up. Klamath will be the next, the state at large following.

The Chicago opera house, one of the most important playhouses in Chicago for many years, is to be torn down. The Marshall Field estate will build a $10,000,000 store and office building on the site.

RUSSIAN WEED IS MENACING

BAKER COUNTY HAS TROUBLE WITH THISTLES.

Union County Stamping Out What Evidence There May Be Here.

Russian thistles are coming to be menacing in many parts of Eastern Oregon and Union county is not the only district where the trouble is somewhat serious. Plans for eradication of the weed in this district have been taken by the various road supervisors throughout the county and the coming few weeks will see a concerted warfare against them. In this relation the Baker Herald tells of the troubles the weeds cause in Baker county:

The Russian thistle pest is bothering the county commissioners who are in regular monthly session. This afternoon the board was taken to view a field of grain belonging to Miles Lee on the Joseph Kennison place.

According to law all thistles must be destroyed and the commissioners are enforcing the law. In some instances this works a hardship as it involves the cutting of a field of grain before it is ripe.

However, the commissioners will enforce the law because the thistle is becoming a pest; and that is the only way it can be eradicated. This is about as late as cutting can be done for the reason that the weed is about ready to go to seed.

CIRCUIT JURY FINAL OFTEN

USELESSNESS OF APPEAL IN MANY CASES SEEN.

Jurors Have Increased Responsibility in Handling Facts.

Appeals from circuit court jury decisions are no longer as popular as before, and since the judiciary amendment passed by the last general election local attorneys commence to believe that appeals hereafter will be rare and only done in extreme cases. The new law covering this matter affirms specifically that where a jury decides a question of fact there shall be no reversal by the supreme court unless there was no evidence to support the verdict. In other words, if John Smith is held by a jury to have killed John Brown, the only questions which can be used as a basis for appeal is whether or not there was substantial justice done or whether there was any evidence to support the verdict. Errors in allowing of testimony or error by the circuit judge in instructing the jury cannot be taken into consideration by the supreme court in affirming or reversing a decision. If the supreme court finds that there was no evidence—not "sufficient," but "no" evidence—to support the verdict, then the case may be reversed. This is rather an unlikely situation to apprehend however. If substantial justice has been done, and errors have crept into the case in the many ways in which they could under the law of former days, then the case must stand and not be reversed. This was seen in the opinion of the supreme court in the Wills vs. Palmer Lumber company case, where Wills won in the supreme court because the court found substantial justice had been done, and regardless of errors in trial, the supreme court could not reverse the decision of the lower court. They could not affirmatively say there was no evidence to support the verdict.

C. E. Cochran, one of the attorneys who have gone into the consistency of appealing cases, admits that in his opinion the jury is supreme on a question of fact and when a jury says a certain man committed a crime, and the judge cannot deny that there was some evidence to support the verdict, then there is no grounds to appeal on and the jury verdict stands until the end of time. The new law puts circuit court juries "up against it hard" and places a great deal of responsibility on such juries where as before jurors contented themselves that if the decision was wrong the supreme court would reverse it.

LIVESTOCK RATES PROBED.

EASTERN ELKS ANXIOUS

LOCAL DELEGATE TO THE GRAND LODGE FORESEES BIG CROWD

Atlantic City Not Deemed Suitable Convention City Any More.

That Denver is one of the prettiest cities in the whole country and outstrips the eastern cities of world-wide fame as sightseeing meccas, is the opinion of Dr. G. L. Biggers, who, since his return a few days ago from Atlantic City, has now about exhausted his experiences to brother Elks and has reached the point where he can discourse on things other than Elkdom.

Joining the Elks' excursion at Portland, Dr. and Mrs. Biggers went to Seattle, and then straight across the continent, landing at Atlantic City in time to participate in the heat wave. The local delegate was one of those who refused to join the parades on account of the extreme heat, the westerners being entirely unfit physically to undergo the strenuous "hike." After attending the grand lodge, the tourists went to New York, where they saw the splendid home of Lodge No. 1, went to Syracuse, Erie, Pa., and several other of the towns rather off the beaten paths of travel, and then home via Chicago, Kansas City, St. Louis, Denver and Salt Lake.

Now that the doctor is home again he is convinced that the city of Portland will entertain its guests in 1912 with much better results than did Atlantic City. The world's resort has come to be so much of a watering place that the better elements aim to go there on business only and do not make it a summer resort. While the hotel accommodations are of the best and of sufficient number, the city as a whole is not a good convention city and Mr. Biggers feels certain that Portland will set a clip of entertainment next year when about 50,000 Elks congregate there, that will make the eastern cities take notice.

"Eastern Elks are anxious to get to Portland and will, many of them, combine business with pleasure next summer when the 1912 convention meets there," said Dr. Biggers today.

Jan Macleren, the noted English actor, is now in New York, ready to go to work for Liebler & Co., who will place him either in "Disraeli" or "The Garden of Allah." Mr. Macleren has never appeared in America, but enjoys a fine reputation in England.
