SNAKE CHARMER TAKES HER LIFE

PRETTY MISS WHO CHARMED MEN AND SNAKES, SUICIDES.

Death Results From Fatal Accident to Fellow Carnival Member.

Tragedy seems to have followed the Miller Carnival company since its appearance in Elgin and Joseph in June. Shortly after leaving there Balloonist O'Donnell was drowned in the Snake river and his body found near Huntington and now a news dispatch tells of the suicide of Grace Moreland, the snake charmer, who was also there, because of grief over his fate. Miss Moreland was touted for her beauty, and at Joseph especially had a long string of admirers, it is said. Following is the dispatch from Boise:

Cold and lifeless, the body of Miss Grace Moreland, a snake charmer employed by the Miller Carnival company, now playing here, was found on the bed in a room at the Iberia hotel by Jose Navarro, one of the owners of the place yesterday afternoon. The girl had taken chloroform. Despondency is said to have been the motive that led her to end her life.

Fearing that something was wrong, he telephoned the police, and two officers with a physician answered the call. The room was locked and the officers had to procure a pass key to make their way into the room.

They found the dead woman still clutching the bottle of chloroform with which she had ended her life. A towel and a drinking cup lying beside her on the bed made it appear that she had inhaled and drank the deadly fluid. But a half teaspoonful of the liquid was left in the bottle. There seemed to be no smell of chloroform in the room, but the bottle in the girl's hand had the chloroform label on it and the little bit remaining was unmistakably chloroform.

"Be sure I'm dead before you bury me," That was the message she left to the coroner. In her handbag two letters were found, one of them a message to Frank Miller, the other a letter to George Patrick, prison guard, Presidio, San Francisco, Cal. Both were sealed.

Despondency over the death of R. J. O'Donnell, a balloonist formerly with the Miller company, who was drowned in the Snake river at Weiser a few weeks ago, and to whom the girl was engaged, is thought by Frank Miller, proprietor of the shows, to have caused Miss Moreland to take her life.

The letter addressed to Miller was given to him, and he immediately tore it open. He said that in the missive she gave no motive for her act except to say: "I'm tired of this accursed world and don't want to live any longer. Please do not let my grandmother know I did not die a natural death." In the letter to Miller the girl also left a few instructions about the disposal of her effects. On the back of the envelope, written with pencil, and evidently an afterthought, was the message, "Be sure I'm dead before you bury me. Please register and mail the letter to Patrick."

Miss Moreland had been out to a show the night before, and had retired about 1.30 in the morning. Those who were with her say that she was apparently cheerful and in the best of spirits.

Frank Miller, the owner of the concern, was shocked when informed of the affair. "She has never been the same since O'Donnell died," said Miller, "but I never expected anything like this. She and O'Donnell had been just like brother and sister, and she fainted when she heard the news of his death."

"She has been with my company for three years, and I am not acquainted with her yet. She never mixed with anybody, and with the exception of O'Donnell never talked to anybody but held herself aloof from everyone."

"With all her reserve she was in a way popular with the other members of the company, and was always liked by those who met her. She was a refined girl and always seemed to me as though she were built on too fine a plan to be in the carnival business."

"Miss Moreland's home was in Tillamook, Ore., but I believe the only relative she has living now is her grandmother, Mrs. Loretta Daily, living at Portland."

FAIR STOCK IS ENTERED

WALLA WALLA EXPERIENCES AN EARLY INTEREST.

September Fair at Garden City Promises to Be Successful.

Walla Walla, Aug. 17.—(Special)—With 13 pens of high grade hogs already entered for the annual Walla Walla county fair, to be held in the Garden City, September 18-23, indications are that this department of the big show will be without doubt the best and most complete in the history of the association. These animals were entered by a breeder who lives in another county but who is desirous of competing for the big prizes offered this year by the Walla Walla association.

Another big display this year will be that of grains and grasses, the entries being already numerous and varied, while the fruit and vegetable display gives promise of being something wonderful. In all departments, the association has hung up larger prizes making it an inducement for people of southeastern Washington to make entries and participate in the competition.

Secretary R. H. Johnson is desirous of having all entries made at the earliest possible moment, in order that proper space may be allotted the various exhibits and excellent arrangement assured.

The big pavilion will be completely overhauled and put in the best possible shape for the convenience of the thousands who are expected to enter its portals, while throughout, the grounds are to be brilliantly lighted.

The race program will offer better amusement for lovers of turf sports than ever before, while Ruzzi's famous Italian band will furnish the musical programs for the week.

Entries in the six-day relay race are now open and it is desired that as many contestants as possible may participate.

New Bridge Over Powder.

Work was commenced yesterday at North Powder upon the Baker-Union county bridge across the North Powder river at that point. The bridge is a 55 foot structure and is being built as one of a series now being erected by the Coast Bridge company for Baker county. The company has just completed a bridge across Powder river at Roblinette, 120 feet long and a 52 foot bridge across Pine creek two miles east of Pine. As soon as the North Powder bridge is completed work will be commenced upon three bridges to be 60, 75 and 80 feet in length, respectively, across Burnt river in the Weatherby section.

Lehman Stage Runs Away.

The stage from Lehman Springs to Pilot Rock, figured in a runaway yesterday, according to reports reaching here, and it was necessary to secure another team and wagon to complete the trip. A number of suitcases, several of which belonged to Pendleton people, were scattered for several miles through the timber during the mad dash.—Pendleton East Oregonian.
