BAKER WANTS RATES.

Will Have Hearing Before State Railroad Commission.

Baker, Ore., Aug. 25.—(Special)—The Commercial club has received notice that the state railroad commission will meet in Baker in September for the purpose of considering all data that the club or other interests can produce relating to distance, class and commodity tariffs of the O. W. R. & N. line in the eastern half of the state.

This action is the direct result of the movement launched by the club at its last meeting. At that time it was proposed to petition the commission to consider the matter of placing all tariffs upon a purely mileage basis. After considerable discussion it was decided that it would be more courteous to the commission to take the matter up by letter before making a formal demand through a petition.

Baker was the pioneer in this movement and other commercial clubs took the matter up, Medford leading off for the western part of the state. That this movement launched by the Commercial club of Baker has already borne fruit is seen in the announcement by the state railroad commission that it will conduct a statewide investigation into the subject of freight rates of all kinds within the state. Besides the hearing at Baker two will be held at the state capitol for the Southern Pacific and the western part of the O. R. & N. line.

The idea of the commission in ordering this investigation is to secure data for the establishment of uniform and reasonable rates in all parts of the state. It is known to the commission and others familiar with the situation, especially Baker business men, that in many instances the rates that prevail at the present time are discriminatory in character against certain parts of the state and in favor of certain cities.

Whether or not the commission will finally adopt the flat mileage basis as suggested by the Baker club will depend upon the developments brought about by the investigations. However the commission is on its way and the prediction was freely made today by Baker men interested in the rate question that this will be the ultimate action.

The commission is notifying all the commercial clubs and other bodies interested in the rate question in order that these bodies may be on hand with the data that they have acquired. The railroad companies have been served with formal notices to be present and present their side of the matter.

STREET DANCE AT PENDLETON

ROUNDUP TO HAVE AN OLD-TIME ENDING.

Public Dance to Be Given in Streets of Pendleton Last Night.

Pendleton, Ore., Aug. 25.—(Special)—As a grand finale to the three days' Roundup next month, a cowboy street dance has been planned and everyone will be invited to "shake their legs" in old time square dances and reels. Main street between Water and Court will be roped off after the pavement has been swept clean as a ballroom floor and there will be no traffic through that thoroughfare. Two bands will furnish music for the rollickers, one to be stationed at each end of the enclosure. In the midblock will be a high platform upon which the callers will shout out their "alamon rights" and "do-de-dos" while the dancers circle in and out and wheel 'em on the corner.

Masks will be prohibited so that possibility of the element of rowdiness making its entrance will be avoided. Everybody will be expected to participate in this novel terpelchorean entertainment and the directors of the Roundup promise to leave nothing undone to make it a fitting end to the big northwest frontier celebration.

SEASON'S PLANS FOR STAR PLAYERS.

New York, Aug. 25.—The theatrical season of 1911-12 is about to open and the big producing managers of this city, the star players, their agents connected with the task of preparing things for the opening of the theatrical season are as busy as bees preceding the opening of the season are indeed full of the most strenuous activity for all concerned and the general public has but a faint idea of the gigantic task of planning and preparing the season's work in the theatrical profession.

The producing managers have been extremely active during the summer months and, after a careful survey of the available new plays produced since the beginning of last season, have made their selection of such of the plays as desired and in their opinion, would best fit the peculiar tastes and talents of their star players, masculine as well as feminine. A big crop of new plays has been gathered and practically every one of the prom-ment stars will be provided with a new medium, in addition to plays already known to the stars have won success in former seasons.

John Drew will open his season at the Empire Theatre, New York, on Labor Day, with "The Single Man," and if the play makes a hit, will probably continue it for the rest of the season.

Ethel Barrymore will follow John Drew at the Empire Theatre, playing "The Witness for the Defense." Her leading man will be A. E. Anson.

Mrs. Fiske has prepared two new plays for the coming season and will open toward the end of September in "The New Marriage," a comedy by Langdon Mitchell.

Alla Nazimova, who is under the management of Charles Frohman, will appear in a new play adapted from the French, the name of which has not yet been given.

James K. Hackett will have two new plays during the coming season, one by the author of "The World and His Wife," and the other by James Fagan.

Robert Edson will begin his season in Providence about the middle of the month, in "The Cave Man," a comedy by Gillette Burgess. Grace Ellington will be his leading woman.

Margaret Illington has a new play called "Kindling," from the pen of Charles Kenyon. She will tour the west during the first part of the season.

Helen Ware will begin her season in Boston, in "The Price," and will not reach New York until the latter part of the season.

Elsie Ferguson will not begin her season until some time in October, when she will appear in "Dolly Madison," a play by Chas. Nirdlinger.

George Arliss will open his season at Wallack's Theatre, New York, in Louis N. Parker's new play, "Disraeli," founded upon episodes in the life of the great statesman.

Margaret Anglin will present two new plays this coming season. She will open the season, in "Green Stockings," and later will try Isreal Zangwill's play, "The New Religion."

Frank McIntyre will begin his star season in "Snobs," a comedy by Geo. Bronson Howard, and will have the support of a strong company.

"The Arab," a play of the Orient, by Edgar Selwyn, has been selected as the medium for the author of the play and the title role will be played by Mr. Selwyn.

Some time next month E. J. Dodson will appear in "Gauntlet's Pride," a new comedy by Hartley Manners and later he will take the play on a tour.

Elsie Janis has decided to continue
