

Theisis THEATRE

KEEP YOUR EYE ON THIS AD

"A Country Cupid" . . . Biograph
A beautiful country love story with an intensely dramatic situation brought about by a half-witted lad.

"The New Church Carpet" . . . Edison
A peculiarly interesting reproduction. What became of the money subscribed for the new carpet?

"Birds of a Feather" . . . Vitaphone
This is a roaring comedy. It's a Vitaphone. Can't describe it here. Come and see it.

Beautiful Queen of Spain and Her Three Handsome Children

QUEEN VICTORIA of Spain, one of the handsomest of the royal women of Europe, and her three handsome children are shown above. Her eldest son, the Prince of Asturias and heir to the throne, is a fine, sturdy chap, but the second son, Prince Jaime, who is on her right, is not so fortunate. He was born July 22, 1908, and should have begun talking some time ago. He is under the care of several experts, and the hope is held out that an operation will relieve him and cure his ailment. Princess Beatrice is a year and a day younger than Prince Jaime. Queen Victoria is a daughter of the youngest daughter of Queen Victoria of England.

STRAY TOPICS FROM LITTLE OLD NEW YORK.

New York, Aug. 30.—The world seems to have gone speed crazy. It began with the bicycle, took a tremendous bound when automobile came into use and positively surpassed the sanity line after the introduction of aeroplanes. Speed, speed, to break speed records, seems to be the sole aim in life of thousands of persons who daily sacrifice or at least endanger their own lives and those of other persons, not at all interested in breaking speed records by racing their automobile are aeroplanes through space with the velocity of a hurricane. In their mad desire to make the utmost speed automobilists disregard the laws, take the most desperate risk and wantonly destroy the lives of other human beings. The daily list of accidents and deaths caused by the speed mania and recklessness of automobilists is appalling and the law seems to be powerless to put a stop to it. It is true that occasionally a few of the offending automobilists are arrested, but they seem to consider that merely as one of the annoying features of the sport. The fine which they have to pay is a trivial matter and they grumble only because they were checked in their mad rush. In view of the unreasonably large number of speed limit violations within the limits of Greater New York the conviction is gaining ground that a change of the speed laws is not only desirable but absolutely necessary. The penalty for such violations should be imprisonment, not a mere fine. Every man who races through the public streets of a densely populated city is a potential slayer and should be punished on the same theory that an armed burglar is considered by the law a potential murderer.

One of the policemen attached to the Thirty-fifth street station, a handsome and athletic young fellow was in sure enough misery the other day. A woman keeping a boarding house called him into her house, while he was on patrol duty and informed him that a woman who had rented a room from her the day before, had disappeared, deserting her infant. The youngster made its presence known by lusty yells and there was nothing for the young policeman to do but to take the bawling baby in his arms and gingerly carry it through the crowded streets to the police station. To his giant strength the baby was like a feather, but when he arrived at the station he was perspiring profusely and ready to drop. Along the entire route from the boarding house to the station the jeers and laughter of the people on the street had been accompanying him every step, until he felt like crawling into a rat hole and pulling the hole in after him. But his troubles were by no means ended after he had reached the station. The baby, still howling, could not remain at the station and the lieutenant in charge decided that the bawling youngster had to be taken to Bellevue hospital. Once more the young officer had to pack his squirming and yelling burden and carry it to the hospital. That he felt and, perhaps, whispered to himself, would not look well in print. He said to a friend afterward that such an experience had a strong tendency to make a man a confirmed bachelor.

Since the recent conjunction of Mars and Saturn Union square has been the center of attraction to thousands of person eager to get a glimpse at the heavenly wanderers. An enterprising man with a small, but powerful telescope, took his stand early every evening on the west side of Union square, and all through the evening he was surrounded by crowds gladly willing to pay a dime each for a peep at the planets. Sometimes 20 or 30 persons stood in line, waiting for their turn at the telescope and the enterprising astronomer did a land office business.

There was a regular mixup of Murphys in the Butler street district of Brooklyn the other day. A man named Thomas Murphy walked into a candy store kept by Mrs. Elizabeth Murphy and asked for a package of cigarettes. She handed him a package and he walked briskly out of the store without having paid for the cigarettes. Mrs. Murphy gave chase but Thomas Murphy added insult to injury by throwing a murphy—that is a perfectly good potato—into Mrs. Murphy's left eye. Her yells brought Policeman Peter Murphy to the scene, who captured Thomas Murphy and, with Mrs. Murphy forming the rear guard, led him in triumph to the Butler street station. There Officer Murphy and Mrs. Murphy told their stories to Lieutenant Murphy in charge of the desk. Thomas Murphy, the prisoner, tried to turn the matter into a joke, but Lieutenant Murphy failed to see the point and had Thomas Murphy locked up for disorderly conduct.

The sanitary code ordinance, which comes into force in New York City on October 1, abolishes drinking cups in public places, hotels public schools, railroad stations, theatres and factories. Some of the large hotels will discontinue the fountains in their foyers, while others will station girls or pages at the fountains, who will serve water to thirsty guests free of charge in individual glasses. The theatres will also close their fountains, but will continue to have water served to patrons in the auditorium by uniformed boys. Children will have to do the same, as it will be a violation of the law for any person to loan his or her drinking cup to another person.

A bridge tender employed on one of the bridges across Harlem river and another man had an exciting battle with a big sturgeon, weighing more than 400 pounds, while hundreds of people breathlessly watched them from the bridge across the river. The monster fish had followed the incoming tide and disported himself in the Harlem river, hunting for food, when he was espyed by a number of boys who were bathing in the river. Thinking that the big fish was a shark they hurried from the water and yelled a warning to other bathers. The bridge tender saw the fish and, accompanied by another man, set out in his boat determined to capture the monster. He succeeded in luring the fish into shallow water and to spear him with his boathook. The fish, a sturgeon, was the largest of its kind captured in these waters for many years.

Marine Traffic Enormous.

Washington, Aug. 30.—The small part taken by the United States in the great marine traffic of the world is reflected in the annual report of navigation through the Suez canal just received by the department of commerce and labor.

In the year 1910 the vessels passing through the canal numbered 4,533 and the tonnage was 16,581,898. Of this great mass of shipping 30 vessels with 105,703 tonnage, displayed the stars and stripes. Twenty-seven of the 30 vessels were war ships.

In the showing of nations this country was below Great Britain, Germany, the Netherlands, France, Austria-Hungary, Italy, Japan and Russia.

The total number of passengers carried through the canal last year was 233,978, of which the military totaled 76,854, civilians 128,171 and pilgrims, emigrants and convicts 28,953.
