"CAPTAIN KATE" FINE FILM. Film Entitled "Captain Kate, or The Animal Trader's Daughter," at the Arcade. The prediction of the Selig company that each of their pictures of African scenes showing wild animals in their native haunts would surpass the one that preceded it has been amply fulfilled. "Captain Kate" is even more interesting and commendable in every way than either "Zululand," or "Back to the Primitive," good as these pictures both were, and all who saw them when exhibited at the Isis theatre a short time ago will remember them as being among the best ever shown. Like the others it is exciting and like them it gives the spectator a new experience and one which is highly educational. The photography of all the scenes in Captain Kate is markedly superior to what we usually see. They are marvels of good acting and camera work. This is the third of a great series of animals in their native haunts by Selig.
