A floor pad of newspapers, piled two inches high or so, will be the delight of the busy ironer. One side should be covered with floor linen, the other with carpet—the linen for summer and the carpet for winter. It is an unbelievable relief to tired feet.—Philadelphia North American.

MRS. HETTY GREEN, popularly credited with being the world's richest woman, has a new home, having leased the house at No. 5 West Ninetieth street, New York. Living in a "brownstone front" is something of a new experience for Mrs. Green. Despite her great wealth she has always been credited with being of a thrifty turn of mind, and her places of abode have not been of a character to set back her bank account to any very great extent. For years she occupied a flat in Hoboken, N. J., said to have cost $14 a month. A few years ago she created a mild sensation by going to live at one of New York's leading hotels in rooms for which it was said she paid $30 a day. But her stay there was measured in days, and back she went to Hoboken. For a time, after the marriage of her daughter Sylvia to Matthew Astor Wilks, she made her home with the Wilkses in ultra fashionable Madison avenue near the home of J. Pierpont Morgan and other notables. But she soon tired of that and again went back to her little flat. Now announcement is made that she will reside permanently at the West Ninetieth street house, which adjoins the stylish Central Park West and overlooks the park. Whether this latest home will be to her entire liking remains to be seen, but she gives promise of continuing there now that she has turned her business cares over to her son and looks forward to a life of quiet and ease.

BUSINESS SIDE OF FARMING

B'xcell of O. A. C. Issues Second Edition of Valuable Book.

Oregon Agricultural College, Corvallis, Ore., Sept. 13.—Dean J. A. Bexell of the commerce department of the Oregon Agricultural college has just issued a second edition of his book on "The Business Side of Farming," in response to the increasing demand for a more businesslike management of farm properties.

The cost of production of crops, household accounts, special records and the application of single and double entry bookkeeping to the needs of the farmers are all discussed, with numerous illustrations to make the text clearer. The frontispiece is a cut showing an ideal desk for a farmer containing a small fire-proof safe to contain his valuable records, such as pedigree certificates of blooded stock, insurance papers, and similar things.

The work of this laboratory will deal exclusively with research problems in entomology. The more intricate problems that require very close investigation connected with insect pests and insecticides will receive the attention of the laboratory experts.

PICKED A SAFE SPOT.

He Wanted an Easy Fall if He Missed the Big Bear.

The red bear of Asia lives in lofty mountain solitudes, rarely coming below an altitude of 8,000 feet. For the greater part of the year he is content with a vegetarian diet and leads a blameless and estimable life, but in the spring he becomes mischievous, and then a man who pursues him in his native haunts must be a mountaineer as well as a hunter. The following incident from "Sport and Life in the Further Himalayas," by R. L. Kennion, illustrates the double danger.

My Gilgit stalker used to tell of a bear that was a terror to the goat herds sent to graze the village flocks in the Rakhot glen, not only a robber, but a truculent one, who committed his crimes in the broad light of day and cared for neither man nor dog. Gul Sher encountered him when out with T., a noted shot from among the small party of officers then at Gilgit. Behind them yawned a precipice; in front was the big beast, grunting and slavering at the mouth. They faced one another "while men could count a score," and still T. did not shoot. The bear advanced.

"Shoot!" cried Gul Sher, but T. only looked round over his shoulder. The bear came on. Then T. slowly put his rifle up and shot him dead through the head.

"And why had not T. shot him before?" I asked.

"That is what I wanted to know," the stalker said, "and he told me that he was just looking for the easiest place to go down the precipice in case the bear was not killed."

I was sitting hearing the story at the exact spot where it happened and, going to the edge, looked over. The first thing to break a fall was a green lawn of pine treetops 2,000 feet below.—Youth's Companion.

What "Pa" Says

"Sure we use electric lights. When I go home of an evening, dead tired, I like to flop down in an easy chair, light up my old 'jimmy pipe,' and read. An' I want a LIGHT—a REAL light—not a smoky, flickery apology for one.

"An' I'm a fresh air bug too. Say! d'jever try to keep a coal oil lamp goin' with a breeze comin' through the window? Some job, ain't it? An' say: with kids like them of mine, I'd be scared to death that somethin' would happen if I left 'em alone for a minute with a oil lamp. No, they ain't no worse than other kids, I guess, but the way they roughhouse around would sure drive me wild if they was a lamp to explode or git overturned.

"Ma, she didn't like the idea of puttin' in lights at first. Said they would be too darn expensive. Ma's savin', but she found they don't cost much more than her old lamps, an' she don't have to fuss an' bother 'bout fillin' an' cleanin' 'em. Then I got her a electric iron, an' she figures she can do her week's ironin' in jest about half the time, an' actually SAVE money. No, you can't git ma to go back to the old oil lamps.
