Carmen Artistic Success.

Carmen as produced by Miss Morgan at the Steward theatre last night proved a most artistic success. Miss Morgan handling the title role with much finesse. Her capable work in this part alone shows that she is a star who is worthy the name. Roy D. Way as "Jose Sibengoa," Miss Helen Shipman as "Dolores" and Melvin Mayo as "Escannillo," are all most worthy of praise.

The scenery and lighting effects were most beautiful and showed remarkable ability on the part of the stage manager. Tonight Miss Morgan and her associate players will produce Dion Boucicaults Jammers' Irish comedy drama, "A Colleen Bawn" with special scenery and costumes.

Reserved seats on sale as usual at J. Van Buren's cigar store.

Miss Courtenay Morgan, who, with her company, has made a tremendous hit in stock productions at the Steward and this week. She closes her stay in the city tonight after having filled the Steward to capacity almost, every night of the week.

Florence Roberts, actress of national fame as the wife in "Jim, the Penman," coming to the Steward October 10th, featuring three nationally famed stars. Miss Roberts has often been promised to La Grande but this is the first time that it actually appears. John Cort is not to deny the theatre goes here that pleasure. It is authentically stated, that if the Steward opera house is filled to capacity, the receipts will just about meet the expenses of the company for stopping here, but the night in La Grande breaks a long jump which would otherwise fall to the company's lot.
