

The Isthmian THEATRE

"Cherry Blossoms" Vitagraph
One of the brightest and sweetest stories ever told. It fairly blooms with the beauty and fragrance of cherry blossoms and love. It carries from West Point to Japan.

"The Trapper's Fatal Shot" Pathe

A fine Indian story. A little white captive girl is being taken back to her parents by an old Indian when the trapper shoots and kills.

"The Dark Romance of a Tobacco Can" and "Never Believe in Signs" Essanay

Without a doubt two of the raciest comedies ever shown. They are by the Essanay company. We say they're good. Come in and laugh your approval.

EXPERT TESTIMONY.

A Case Where Two Infallibles Held Conflicting Opinions.

The fallibility of expert testimony, which under stress of clever cross examination tends to the too decided statement, is amusingly revealed in "Science and the Criminal," a book by C. Alsworth Mitchell, the head of the inspection bureau of Scotland Yard.

Nethercliffe, who was the chief handwriting expert in the days when the witty Lord Brampton was at the bar, had such faith in his methods that finally he came to believe that he could not make a mistake.

In a case in which he was under cross examination by Lord Brampton, then Mr. Hawkins, Nethercliffe had claimed that his system gave infallible results and had further stated that his son, whom he had trained, made use of the same system.

"Then," said the wily advocate, "your son, working on your system, is as good as you are?"
"Yes," replied the father, with some pride in his voice, "he is."
"That is to say, he, too, is infallible?"

"Yes," again replied the witness.
"Well, now, Mr. Nethercliffe, was there ever a case in which you and your son appeared on opposite sides?"
Nethercliffe tried to evade the question, which, he complained, was an unfair one, but on being pressed was forced to admit that on a certain occasion he had given evidence on one side and his son upon the other. Swift came the unanswerable retort:

"How comes it, then, that two infallibles appeared on opposite sides?"

The Origin of "Booze."
The Turks make a liquor from barley which is called booz and which, although fermented, is not prohibited like wine, because it gives heat and strength to the body of Moslem warriors and goes for hunger. Excess in drinking it brings on gout and dropsy. —Evila Effendi. "Travels."

RADIUM RAYS.

Their Velocity the Highest Known Speed of Matter in Motion.

The earth travels in its orbit round the sun nineteen miles a second. The sun itself, like all the other stars, has its own proper motion through space. Some authorities have calculated its speed at twelve miles a second. A few stars move more slowly than this, others much more rapidly. Arcturus maintains a speed of not less than 100 miles a second, and the star called "Groombridge 1830" travels 150 miles in the same brief time.

But the speeds of the heavenly bodies are slow compared with the motions of the tiniest known particles of matter. The sun would seem to stand still could we compare its velocity with that of the radium "rays." These radiations are produced by successive explosions of tiny groups of the tiny atoms of radium. The "alpha rays," being themselves infinitesimal fragments of matter, are thrown out with a velocity of perhaps 12,000 miles a second. The "beta rays" travel still faster.

In the emanations of this wonderful radium we find the highest known speed of matter in motion. At 12,000 miles a second it would take little more than two seconds for a particle of matter to travel all the way round the earth. Look at your watch and note the duration of two seconds; then imagine that in a chariot drawn by "alpha rays" you have been round the world. There is hardly time in two seconds for you to think the journey.

The highest measured speed, however, is not the speed of matter, but the speed of that ethereal vibration which we call light. And light travels at the rate of 186,000 miles a second. —Youth's Companion.

"The Thunderer."

It was the mud flinging of an earlier mode of travel than the motorbus that gave the London Times its nickname of "The Thunderer." Two ladies at Kew had been splashed by an unmannerly horseman passing them too closely, and the Times came out with a strong leader alleging the offender to have been the Duke of Cumberland. In due course it was found that the horseman was not the duke, and in a further article by way of apology the Times used the words "We thundered out," an expression that so tickled the public that the name of "Thunderer" was bestowed on the paper forthwith.

Her Proposal.

"Ah, George! Did you propose to Vivian?"
"No. She made the proposal before I had a chance to say anything."
"She did? What did she say?"
"She proposed that I should leave the house immediately, and I accepted." —London Telegraph.

A Business Woman.

"His wife is a business woman, all right."
"What makes you say that?"
"She's installed a time clock in the hall, and he has to punch it when he goes out nights and when he gets back." —Detroit Free Press.

A Natural Result.

"When you were in Switzerland did your party climb the glacier you spoke of?"
"No."
"Why not?"
"I rather think because they got cold feet." —Exchange.

Being alone when one's belief is firm is not being alone. —Auerbach.

A Notable Statue.

In the beautiful city of Buenos Aires is perhaps the only statue in the world erected by white men to a negro. This is the statue of Falucho, a negro soldier who refused to haul down the Argentine flag at the bidding of the Spanish soldiery during the first Argentine revolution and was shot down by the Spanish.

The Last Word.

"What's the first word in the dictionary?" asked the student.
"The article 'a,' of course," replied Mr. Growcher.
"And what's the last word?"
"Ask my wife. She's an expert on the subject." —Washington Star.
