AT THE PLAY HOUSES.

"The Battle Hymn of the Republic" the famous product of Julia Ward Howe, is being shown at the Arcade theatre. This is one of the very finest films that has ever been cast upon a screen in this city. It should be seen by every boy, girl, woman and man in the city. In the opening of the scene is shown good, old, Abe Lincoln as he sity worrying over war matters and wondering where he will get the necessary troops with which to recruit his army, when Julia Ward Howe enters the president's apartments. Lincoln tells her his troubles. That night the poet while asleep, rose and wrote the famous war song that will go ringing down in ages as one of the most inspiring battle sons that pen has ever written. The beautiful part of the film now comes in, showing the wonderful scenes depicted by the inspired sleeping poet. As each verse is written the colered transformation scenes flash upon the screed and in lurid moving pictures tells the story of the dreamer's mind. These pictures are truly wonderful and preaches a living sermon that no pen other than that of Julia Ward Howe could possibly portray. On Wednesday and Thursday Manager George announces that he will have the full score in pictures of the opera "The two Orphans." This film is three thousand feet long and is a whole show in itself. There will be no change in prices.

Last night at the Isis Musical Director King scored another hit by putting on the duet "You Can't be a Friend to everybody," from the opera "Honey Moon.' The rendering of the song as interpreted by Miss Nellie Garrick and Mr. Ferrin was beyond criticism and received the unstinted acclimation of the audience. These catchy duets at the Isis is making a hit with the public, most of whom appreciate a good thing in this line.

"Laugh and grow fat." This is the universal opinion of everybody who has seen Wm. A. Brady's play of a thousand laughs, "Baby Mine," the product of Margaret Mayo's pen, which will be seen here for the first time at the Steward opera house on Saturday, Oct. 21st.

This is just the sort of a play to turn tears into laughter, and to give life a rosy hue—so sayeth one of England's most famous critics, where "Baby Mine" is now running at Sir Charles Wyndham's Criterian theatre, in London, and it should be borne in mind, that over in Londontown, they have heretofore held a strong prejudice against plays of American manufacture, so this superlative praise in favor of "Baby Mine" is all the more remarkable.

The Story of the Play.

"Baby Mine," unlike many a so-called fun play, gets hold of the funny bone of its audience at the very outset and proceeds to tickle it for two and a half hours, not moderately, nor modestly, but boisterously and strenuously, until the audience fairly shouts with glee. A young married couple are quarreling at the very beginning of the performance. In a towering rage, the young husband leaves the house and remains away for three months after which period the clever young wife makes up her mind that woman's ingenuity should be sufficient to bring back her wandering better half. The wife consults a friend who opines that the wife wire the absent husband that he is the proud father of a lusty infant, and the friend volunteers to hire a baby for the occasion. A child is secured for the purpose, but the husband appears on the scene sooner than expected, and even before the child is brought into the house. In the meantime the real mother of the baby is seized with remorse, and demands her child back. Again the friend rushes off to get another baby and it is in the subsequent complications incident to the arrival and rescue of this child that the complications take on an amazingly amusing aspect, with never a suggestion of a letup. Throughout the entire three acts the fun of "Baby" is of the clean, wholesome, cheerful sort, with never the least bit of suggestiveness to mar the enjoyment of the performance.

Manager Brady has sent to this city most of the company that played "Baby Mine" in New York all of last season.
