MYSTERY MAN FACES

for the criminal insane at Matteawan, N. Y., who claimed to be Kimmel. He bore the name of Andrew J. White. In the course of interviews the man gave a number of startling facts about himself purporting to prove that he was Kimmel. According to his original story, he had been assaulted by footpads in Kansas City and the attack had left him mentally irresponsible and for a long time he was unaware of his own identity. While in this condition, he declared, he had committed crimes which led to his imprisonment.

Several years ago the insurance company proceeded in earnest to try to legally establish the man's identity by inducing friends and relatives to visit the convict at Matteawan. Many of these witnesses declared the convict was the George A. Kimmel whom they had known intimately. Mrs. Julia Estelle Kimmel, the mother, and Mrs. Edna K. Bonslett, the sister, after studying the convict carefully, denounced the man as an imposter.

When the convict was released from prison last summer he immediately went to Kimmel's old home in Niles, Mich., where he endeavored to prove that he was the missing bank cashier. The mother and other relatives of Kimmel denounced the man as an imposter. But other residents of Niles who had known Kimmel intimately declared that the man from Matteawan was the former bank cashier. A cousin and uncle of Kimmel, his former Sunday school teacher and a number of business men in good standing held interviews with the claimant. Afterward they related incidents which the "man of mystery" brought to their minds, or they to him, that confirmed their belief they said, that he is the real Kimmel they knew years ago.

An interesting feature in connection with the trial is the fact that both Attorney F. M. Bacon, who has fought for the Kimmel interests for years, and Attorney Edward H. O'Brien of Chicago, who represents the insurance company in the case, knew the real George A. Kimmel. Mr. Bacon knew him from boyhood, and he stoutly declares he cannot be mistaken in the ex-convict, whom he says is not the real Kimmel, while Attorney O'Brien with equal positiveness declares the former convict is the man whom he knew at Kimmel.

SOCIETY SEES CONGRESS

Clark arose in his place. The babel of whispers that followed the chaplain's prayer was silenced as he announced:

"The clerk will call the roll of the states to ascertain the presence of a quorum."

The clerk was instructed to inform the senate that the house was in session, and a committee was appointed to join the senate committee in notifying the president that congress had assembled.

Thereupon the house, out of respect to the memory of the late Representative Madison of Kansas, adjourned.

Vice President on Hand.

On the dot of 12 o'clock, Vice President Sherman, immaculately dressed entered at a door beside the elevated chair and desk at his official station, and a moment later, tapped for order. Senators arose for prayer, the first number on the program, by the chaplain of the senate, Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, pastor of the church of which President Taft is a member.

Then came the business of appointing two senators, to act with a committee of the house, in informing President Taft that a quorum of both houses was assembled and that congress is ready to receive any communication he may be pleased to make. The secretary was directed to notify the house that a quorum of the senate had assembled and was ready for business.

Hoke Smith of Georgia, and Obidiah Gardner, of Maine, were sworn in as United States senators. The senate adjourned at 12:20 until tomorrow and the house adjourned at 2:51 this afternoon.
