JUNGLE SCENES TONIGHT

THIS WILL PRESENT "LOST IN THE JUNGLE."

Praise for the Film Comes from Those Who Have Seen It.

The people of La Grande will remember with much pleasure the series of jungle pictures which from time to time have been produced by the great Selig, the recognized master of all thrilling and sensational moving pictures.

This series included "In Zululand," "Back to the Primitive," "Captain Kate," and the last of the series has been secured by Manager Sherwood for the edification of his patrons for Friday and Saturday of this week.

Magazine articles have been written on this feature film. Newspaper articles have been expressing their wonder and amazement at the question, "How Is It Done?" This superb work of art is entitled "Lost in the Jungle."

Mr. Wm. N. Selig believes that "Lost in the Jungle" is the climax of the series. Miss Kathryn Williams, who appears in the principal role says that over eight weeks were required to train the elephant to perform his part, and that many hundreds of oranges, bananas and other tempting fruit were bestowed on the big animal before he was quite won over to play the role of deliverer. Nor must we forget the important assistance rendered by "Big Otto," the well known animal trainer, during the weeks of persistent and patient rehearsal.

Every one who views the picture will feel like hugging the ponderous brute when he kneels and assists the helpless girl to catch his ears with her hands, in the meantime making a seat of his trunk on which she rests, as he ploughs his way through the thick undergrowth of the jungle. It is a thrilling rescue and fairly startles one by its novelty and realism.

Another thrill is promised in the girl's encounter with a leopard. Shortly before this scene appears, we witness a fierce fight between two leopards and a wild hog, the latter coming out victor. This prepares us for the presence of leopards in the girl's vicinity and when we see her crouch and listen intently, as she gazes into the depths of the forest, we are prepared for a life and death struggle.

The large knife that she carries is gripped more firmly and, like a flash, a leopard rushes toward her and springs full upon her head. The next view taken by the camera shows the girl lying wounded and spent, while beside her lies the leopard turning over on his back in the death throes. In the making of this scene Miss Williams suffered such severe scalp wounds from the animal's claws that nine stitches were required to close them, and she was covered with blood to her waist. A leopard is very fond of wild chickens, and at the first rehearsal of the scene, before the camera man began to turn the handle, everything went well. The chicken was thrown slightly behind and to one side of Miss Williams, as the animal was loosed from his cage, so that he fairly caught sight of its fall. In the second trial the chicken was thrown directly behind Miss Williams, out of the camera's field; and although the leopard saw that the chicken had been thrown he did not see it fall, and concluded that it was under Miss Williams. The courage shown by this lady, and her wonderful influence over wild animals, in the production of this film, are really remarkable.
