PERSONALS.

G. M. Gray and J. T. Gray, both of Alice, were Foley guests last night.

J. J. Coakley of Welser was at the Sommer this morning.

Mrs. Andrew Buckley will be at home after Feb. 15th, at 1602 Sixth st., corner Penn. Avenue.

J. W. Black, formerly a resident of La Grande, was over from Union yesterday staying at the Foley.

Miss Alice Simpson of Walla Walla is here the guest of Mrs. A. W. Nelson for several weeks.

Mrs. Wilkinson is reported as practically fully recovered today after a short illness.

J. W. McAllister is reported resting nicely today and is apparently past the danger point.

Frank Pierce, the gentleman accidentally shot with a shotgun a Saturday is recovering to the satisfaction of hospital attendants.

Mrs. Ellen Hunter of Portland stopped at the Sommer last night, arriving on one of the trains that were tied up here because of the snowstorm.

W. H. James, business manager of the Sacramento Bee at Sacramento, is among the storm imprisoned guests in the city today. He is on his way to Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin J. Elliott, on their way to Chicago, are in the city today awaiting departure of their trains which arrived last night. Mr. Elliott is Pacific coast representative of Leslie's Weekly and Judge.

Conductors Frank Mytenger, Frank O'Hare and C. H. Norris with their crews stayed at the Foley last night. They were a portion of the crews that brought delayed trains to La Grande to be tied up on account of the storm last night.

J. H. Reeds and wife and Mrs. Chas. Johnson and daughter, constitute a party of Burns people staying at the Foley today, the personal guests of P. A. Foley. Mr. Reed is a druggist at Burns and the two ladies are sisters. They will spend the day here and then return to their homes after participating in the prolonged ride from Portland to La Grande.

Card of Thanks.

We wish to express our sincere appreciation for the many kindnesses shown us during the illness and death of our beloved relative.

ELECTRIC ILLUMINATION.

The Difference Between the Arc Light and the Incandescent.

It is a curious fact that while the average man knows that, roughly speaking, there are two kinds of "electric light"—the arc light and the incandescent light—he has a hazy notion of the difference between the two.

The arc light and the incandescent light differ wholly in principle, in brilliancy, in appearance and in the mode of use. The distinguishing difference to an ordinary observer between arc and incandescent lights may be briefly stated thus: Arc lights burn in the open air with carbon stick or pencils, the points or ends of which are heated to a white heat and gradually consumed.

Incandescent lights, on the contrary, are produced inside small glass globes of various shapes from which the air has been exhausted. These lights are caused by the passage of electricity through a fine resisting wire or thread, which is thereby raised into a white or incandescent light without being consumed on account of the absence of air. If air leaks in the filament immediately burns up, and that is the end of it.

The term "arc" is an old one adopted years ago, referring to the supposed shape of an electric spark in passing from one carbon point to the other.—Harper's Weekly.

LIFE CHEAP IN CHINA.

A Coolie Will Give His Life For $200 Paid to His Family.

The most gruesome feature of the fatalistic Chinese and Japanese character—the quality which makes them terrible as well as soldiers—is their stolid view of death. In China a coolie anywhere can be bought for $200, paid to his family, to jump from behind a mound and take the place of the quail or pheasant when the authorities wish to cause a scandal and stop shooting by foreigners in the grave districts.

When China's first railroad of twelve miles, from Wusung to Shanghai, was built in 1876 we all remember that a native whose business of tugging boats along the river was threatened by the new enterprise deliberately walked in front of the train. His death, of course, accomplished the purpose of the mandarins in starting

Robert M. La Follette who yesterday afternoon positively denied that his meeting with Bryan in the Union depot at Chicago this week had anything to do with the formation of another political party that would represent the progressive elements in both the republican and democratic parties.

Wall Street's Name.

Wall street got its name from a military wall or earthworks that was thrown up by the Dutch in 1654. The English colonists in Connecticut, laying claim to all the land "as far as the ocean" moved down and settled on Westchester creek in what is now Bronx borough. The Dutch of New Amsterdam were in great fear of a hostile move down on them and sent an armed force to arrest the approach of the invaders. At the same time they hastily built the wall from river to river to make sure of effective resistance. If the enemy should decide to make a hostile move against New Amsterdam. For a time a regular patrol of soldiers was distributed along the military wall, detachments being assigned to keep close guard over the two gates in the wall, one at what is now Broadway and the other at the East river end. At that period the wall marked the northern boundary of the town of New Amsterdam.—New York Times.

The Travels of a Jewel.

Fanny Kemble when in the United States years ago was persecuted by the attentions of a wealthy lunatic. When finally rejected by her he flung a package upon the table, exclaiming, "Well, at least take this!" and disappeared. The parcel proved to contain a very beautiful jewel. The actress was not long permitted to retain it. She saw no more of her persecutor, but did not remain under any sense of obligation to him. The gem was stolen from her before she quit the United States. She forgot all about it in the course of the years that followed. A very long time afterward she was in Italy. A peddler displayed the contents of his pack before her at Sorrento. There lay the long lost jewel. Through whose hands it had passed there was nothing to show.

Accidents at Home.

A man who, despite the fact that he has several grandchildren, is still fond of his club and the pleasures which lie beyond the domestic circle said in defense of his weakness that he went out to prolong his life "and to avoid dangers." "According to a table recently published by an accident insurance company," he said, "more than one-quarter of the accidents 'happen at home.'" and in proof of the statement he showed this statistical record of accidents: At home, 25.9 per cent; pedestrians, 18.2; automobiles, 11.1; recreation, 11.0; horses and vehicles, 9.9; on street cars 7.2; on railway trains, 4.3; bicycles, 1.2; steamship travel, 1.0; miscellaneous, 10.2.—New York Tribune.

Cost of Revolutionary War.

Justin Winsor in his "The Westward Movement" quotes Thomas Jefferson as his authority for the statement that the money cost of establishing American independence was, in round numbers, $140,000,000. According to the same authority, the war of the Revolution cost England just about five times the above figure—that is to say, about $700,000,000. Thus it will be seen that there are several present day Americans any one of whom is worth much more than it cost to establish the independence of this nation.—New York American.

Taking His Meals Out.

"And do you take your meals out?" asks the village probe, who is garnering information from the former resident who is home from the city for a few days.

"Not until after I have eaten them," wearily responds the unwilling victim. —Judge's Library.

Better Kept Quiet.
