ers' Educational and Co-Operative union of America for the state of Oregon, having been honored with that distinguished position for the second time, and by his untiring industry and devotion to the duties of that responsible office had won for himself a record well worthy of emulation, and had become endeared to the farming interests throughout the state, and had accomplished much to unify and harmonize the local farmers' unions in all sections of this state, travelling over the state at a great personal sacrifice in order that he might help his fellow man, and

Whereas, he was also at the time of his death the president of the Taxpayers' league of Union county, and was always ready to lend a helping hand to try to check public extravagances and economize public expenditures, and

Whereas, he was a neighbor in the true sense of the term, ready to extend a helping hand to all in need, regardless of station or creed, and

Whereas, he was a kind and loving father and husband,
Be It Resolved, by the County Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America for Union county, that the Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative union of Oregon and Union county have lost an able and upright citizen; that the Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative union of America for Union county, has lost one of its ablest and best workers; that the Taxpayers' league of Union county has in the loss of its president has sustained an irreparable loss; and that his family has lost the most of all—a true man, and a kind and loving husband and father, and

Be It Further Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the County Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative union for Union county, a copy given to the press, and a copy given to the bereaved family of Brother McAllister La Grande, Oregon, this the 13th day of January, A. ROMANCE OF A SHOVEL.

An Idea That Won a Fortune For a Railway Laborer.

The simplest labor saving device may quite possibly be worth a fortune. One day a good many years ago a number of men were at work on the roadbed of a line of railway in course of construction between Birmingham and Manchester. They were cutting through a hill and moving the material by loosening it with picks, shoveling it into barrows and wheeling it away. The shovels they were using were known as Irish shovels, with a square cornered blade about fifteen inches long. The work progressed but slowly, and the subcontractor in charge rebuked his workmen for not making quicker progress. One of them replied that if he would grind off the corners of the shovels it would be easier to get them into the earth, and, consequently, they would be able to work more quickly.

The contractor ridiculed the idea, which he considered a piece of insolence on the part of the workman, but the navy was quite in earnest and not easily discouraged. When the work was completed he discussed the matter with a friend of his at Sheffield, who persuaded an ironmonger he knew to make a dozen or so as an experiment. The tools were offered to a large contractor, who promised to let some of his men use the new shovels and report results.

About a week afterward the contractor returned with the information that his men were fairly quarreling as to who should use the new tools, some arriving to work a quarter of an hour before time in order to be there first when the tool box was opened. The navy's suggestion had proved a good one. A patent was secured and an agreement made between the navy, the manufacturer and the contractor. When the navy died he left a fortune of over £65,000, the proceeds from royalties on the manufacture of shovels under his patent.—Pearson's Weekly.

DEATHBED SCENES.

And the Question of Prolonging Life to Its Utmost Limit.

Even the lengthening of a man's life by a day may make death easier by giving him the opportunity of soothing a guilty conscience, of signing a will, of redressing an injustice, of healing a breach of friendship the memory of which might blight another life, of saying farewell to a son or daughter who had come in haste from a great distance. Any one who has seen deathbeds knows how anxieties of this sort may darken the last hours and how their removal may reconcile the sufferer to death. It seems to us that this talk of the right to die and the wrong doing of doctors in seeking to prolong a life that is hanging by a thread springs from the unwholesome sentimentalism and the inevitable accompaniment of selfishness which are among the unhappy notes of the present time.

To the older writers the death agony was the final struggle of the soul leaving the body, and by a confusion of thought due to the acquired meaning of the word it has come to be generally believed that the parting of the spiritual from the material part of man is painful. Those whose lot it has been to stand at many deathbeds know that this is not the case. Sir William Osler says that he has careful records of about 600 deathbeds, studied particularly with reference to the modes of dying and the sensations of the dying. Of these ninety suffered bodily pain or distress of one sort or another, eleven showed mental apprehension, two positive terror, one expressed spiritual exaltation, one bitter remorse. The great majority gave no sign one way or the other.—British Medical Journal.

Chinese Criminal Law.

Curiously like the Moslem and Roman customs, the fixed laws of China are carved in stone and set up in the streets. Chinese criminal law, which is founded on the "Chau Kung," or ritual of Chau, is based upon the accused confessing, and no punishment can ensue until this is brought about. Before the condemned are decapitated they are offered all the samshu they desire to drink, and in most cases they are allowed to choose whether they will ride in a ricksha or be carried in a sedan.—J. S. Thomson's "The Chinese."

Severing Old Ties.

Willie was sent out by his mother to the woodshed to saw and split some stove wood out of a pile of old railroad ties. Going outdoors shortly after, she found the youth sitting on the sawhorse with his head bowed down in his hands. She asked her hopeful why he didn't keep at his work.
"My dear mother," he replied with much feeling, "I find it so hard, so very hard, to sever old ties."—Lippincott's.

Papa's Past.

Little Helen's mamma was discussing the drink question with a visitor, and the child listened gravely to the conversation.
"Papa used to drink," she volunteered suddenly.
The visitor turned her head to conceal a smile, and mamma frowned and shook her head at the little one.
"Well, then," demanded Helen, "what was it he used to do?"—Lippincott's.

Try Crisco For Cooking BETTER THAN BUTTER

A scientific discovery that will affect every kitchen in America. Crisco is a new and heretofore unknown product; an absolutely wholesome and delicious cooking material made under hygienic conditions from edible vegetable oils by a process controlled exclusively by ourselves. It is in no sense a compound or mixture of oils and fats. Foods fried in Crisco absorb less grease. Foods fried in Crisco are deliciously crisp and dry. Crisco fries at such a high temperature that the foods do not soak up grease. They have a golden brown crust and are dry inside. When you use Crisco for frying, the improvement is perfectly plain. You can see the difference at once. Order a package and use it for frying one food after another. Everyone is impressed by this "dry" frying.
