SANFORD DODGE DEPICTS CANADIAN JUNGLE CHARACTERS

A SCENE FROM "FAUST"

"The Right of Way" was pretty well handled last night at the Steward theatre when Sanford Dodge and his well balance company of players delineated the interesting characters in that dramatic series of incidents connected with the wild and rugged life of the Canadian wilds. Mr. Dodge is a capable actor, perhaps not with the polish of some but with enough talent to make himself liked in a critical audience. His supporters are up to standard and the entire troupe is able to carry out important roles. The well-known plot of "The Right of Way," was admirably portrayed by Mr. Dodge and his company, and there is a smacking of the wilds about the story that makes it intensely interesting, having something of the charm of Rex Beach's Alaskan productions.

Matinee Today for Children.

"The Merchant of Venice" is being produced this afternoon for the special benefit of the school children and ladies. Matinee prices prevailed and a large audience was on hand for the Shakespearian rendition.

"Faust" Tonight.

Mr. Dodge and his company tonight present "Faust" promising splendid electrical effects and special scenery to properly handle the production. Mr. Dodge ably demonstrated last evening that he is in position to handle the difficult drama of "Faust" and please an even ultra-critical house.

The character of Martha in "Faust" at the Steward tonight.

The New Brunswick legislature has enacted a stationary boiler inspection law and a workmen's compensation law.

Advertising is Best Business Medicine

The man who starts out to advertise with a set of cast iron rules has not much chance for success. If he says at the beginning of the year: "I am going to spend just $1,000 this year for advertising and not a cent more," he is making a great mistake. It is all right to fix in your mind, in a general way, the amount you expect to spend, but to have a fixed advertising appropriation and to decline good advertising when you need it, simply because the appropriation is exhausted, is a very poor business policy. The amount of advertising necessary depends on the amount of business that it is necessary for you to do. It depends on the conditions of trade, and, to a certain extent, on the weather. Sometimes $10.00 worth of advertising will sell $1,000 worth of goods, and sometimes it will take $50.00 or $100.00 worth of advertising to do it.

Advertising is business medicine, and should be taken in such quantities and at such times as it is needed. A man doesn't decide at the beginning of the year just exactly what he is going to spend for advertising and doctors' bills. If he would wake up some morning at the end of the year and find himself very dead. Business and advertising are just like the man and his medicine.
