JEBEL MUSA.

Mount Upon Which Moses Received the Tables of the Law.

In a wild and desolate region in the southern half of the Sinai peninsula stands the mountain which Moses ascended to receive the tables of the law. From its sacred associations this mountainous region has long been a favorite abode of religious reclines. The mountain itself divides into three parts, and there has been much discussion as to the exact site of the giving of the law.

Jebel Musa, the central of the three peaks, is now considered as best fulfilling the conditions described in Scripture. At its base is the broad plain of sufficient extent to permit the encampment of the hosts of Israel. The peak itself rises to a height of 7,363 feet, and on its northeastern slope, at an elevation of about 5,000 feet, is the monastery of St. Catharine. So precipitous is the side of the mountain at this point that the only means of access to the monastery is by a windlass. In this lofty dwelling place, however, are housed some thirty monks of the Greek church.

The whole place was favorite of the Christian authorities of the early centuries, and the rocks are full of the cells and caves in which they lived. There are to be seen here also numerous ancient inscriptions upon the rocks which are of great interest to archaeologists, and one of the best manuscripts of the Bible was discovered here in 1859.—Brooklyn Eagle.

The Pugnacious Arctic Dog.

Arctic dogs seem to love fighting for its own sake, and so long as it is a fight they are said to be indifferent as to why they fight, how they fight and whom they fight. Two dogs, seeing another dog enjoying a meat can that has been empty for months, will spring on him, roll him over and seemingly tear him to pieces. Fortunately, the wool is so long and thick that the attacking dog gets his mouth too full of hair to be able to bite his antagonist's flesh. The dogs know that their vulnerable points are the ears and belly. When a dog is attacked by two or three of his companions he will run into a snow bank, shove his head in and, lying on his stomach, let his foes choke themselves with the hair they tear out of his back.—Harper's.

HARNESSING A SHARK.

Cruel Revenge That Has the Sanction of Immemorial Custom.

The shark's jaws are pried open to the fullest extent. A stout eight foot spar of tough timber, 4 by 4 inches in cross measurement, is fixed transversely far back in the angle of the jaw, the ends projecting on either side. A strong rope leading from the ends of the spar is drawn close and tightened with a clove hitch round the fish's tail behind the wide tail flukes. It is thus the sailor harnesses his enemy.

The clamp of the cruel jaws drives the two inch long teeth deep into the tough spar. The tight line holds it in place, and, struggle as he may, the shark fails to move the spar an inch from its position. As a finishing touch the sailor drew his knife blade across the shark's eyeballs and let him go.

Bitted and bridled, blinded, with jaws wide gaping, he swam through a limitless sea in never ending fatuous circles. The queer furnishings he bore scared away others of his kind. Lonely and silent, he passed like Cain among the fishes till starvation and sheer misery ended his existence.

Cruel? Of course it was. But surely, like the venomous snake, the shark has long put himself beyond the pale of human mercy. Soft hearted as he usually is, the sailor man has a long memory. The shark has followed for weeks in the shadow of his ship and has watched each man of the crew with greedy, malevolent eye. There is a heavy debt against all the shark tribe for many a lost mariner, and when the chance comes to settle old scores the sailor pays it to the full. Besides, the thing has the sanction of immemorial custom. It was some old Phoenician, trading out of Tyre to the far Cassiterides, who probably first put the trick in practice.—Wide World Magazine.

Getting It Straight.

"So the bank teller has disappeared. Was he short in his cash?"

"No; he was ahead. It was the bank that was short."—Boston Transcript.
