TIMELY HINTS FOR FARMERS

Tankage as a Hog Food.

Tankage is one of the best known materials for balancing up a ration for hogs and for preventing the depraved appetite which is the cause of pig eating. It is a very concentrated feed and should find a place on every farm where hogs are kept. We still have inquiries, however, from farmers who have never used it, as well as positive statements in regard to the possibility of hog cholera and other diseases being transmitted and disseminated through the tankage, says the Kansas Farmer. Let us say again that there is no possibility of hog cholera or any other disease being transmitted in the tankage itself unless, of course, the tankage should have become contaminated after leaving the packing house. Tankage is composed of a refuse of packing house animals and even of the bodies of those which may have died of disease, but this material is so thoroughly cooked under heavy steam pressure that there is absolutely no chance of any germs remaining alive in it.

Ensilage For Sheep.

Years ago shepherds used to object very strenuously to the use of silage for their flocks, asserting that it caused colic, scours and other intestinal disturbances of one sort and another. No doubt it did, for the silage of early days was an extremely watery and acid product, being made, as it was, from immature corn. Since silage making methods have improved and silage has become a dried, sweeter product one practically never hears a complaint registered against it for sheep feeding purposes. Feeders all over the country are using it, and using it extensively. Silage intended to be used for sheep should be cut up extremely fine, as they will not eat coarse feed.

Building Up the Soil.

Any soil which has once been rich can be made rich again, and soils which have never been rich can be improved. Depletion of the soil comes through the destruction of organic matter by cultivation or otherwise, and this can be restored by the use of barnyard manure or by plowing under green crops like cowpeas, soybeans or alfalfa. Everything grown upon the land that is not of value for food should be returned to the soil for its enrichment.

TREATMENT FOR CALF SCOURS

Cleanliness and Light Aid In Keeping Stock Well.

A lot of calves will be coming into the world now soon and the dairy farmer who has had trouble with scours must look out. First, special care is taken to avoid scours by keeping the calves in clean, bright, well lighted and well ventilated quarters. They are fed regularly until four weeks old on two to six pounds of their mothers' milk three times daily. Care is taken to have the temperature of the milk as near that of freshly drawn milk as possible and always to have the calf pail scrupulously clean.

In spite of all precautions you will now and then have cases of scours. For the past two years such cases have been treated as follows: As soon as symptoms appear two to four tablespoonfuls of castor oil are mixed with one-half pint of milk and given to the calf. This is followed in four to six hours by one teaspoonful of a mixture of one part salol and two parts subnitrate of bismuth. It can also be given with one-half pint of new milk or the powder placed on the tongue and washed down by a small amount of milk.

The salol and subnitrate of bismuth mixed in the proper proportions at the time of purchase and thus have the powder readily available for use at any time. As an additional precaution against contagious scours it is advised that the navel of the new born calf be

CANT GAP IN THE SEAT!

An exclusive Superior feature. "The gap without the gap," is a seat that can't spread open because it interlocks like the ends of a collar. And it—CANT bind in the crotch!

—because it adjusts itself instantly to every position, always stays shut and always sets snug and smooth. Another exclusive Superior feature—gives DOUBLE WEAR where the wear is hardest!

This is a reinforced crotch that takes all strain off the front buttons, crotch and leg seams, and makes impossible the ripping, tearing and stretching so common there. And the Superior always fits perfectly! Its fabric is so elastic it gives entire freedom of action, yet never loses its figure-knit design. Cuffs and ankles are fashioned so they never "creep." And there is a Superior size for every man.

Cows and Hens.

A good cow will make more money than any other farm animal, and the money so realized does the farmer more good than that realized from any other animal. Cream sells for cash. The cow eats today and tomorrow her milk, cream or butter sells for money. The hen cashes her feed in the same way and she, as well as the cow, deserves the respect and good care of every farmer.

The Horse's Teeth.

Cutting the teeth in old animals is sometimes practiced with good results, but is not often necessary. It is, however, a wise policy to have a horse's teeth floated once in two years, thus enabling him better to grind his food.

The Important Scale.

Much is said about scales on the farm, but the most important scale is the one that hangs up behind the cows and is used after every milking.

Equals.

The Rev. Anna Howard Shaw said recently in Philadelphia of an opponent of coeducation:

"Perhaps he objects because he is aware that equal education does away with man's superiority. The average man, of course, won't be superior to the average woman when they are both equally well educated. His assertions won't be accepted then unquestioningly.

"Indeed, his assertions already are beginning to be questioned here and there. Thus there was a young chap at the seashore who, on being refused by a beautiful girl, said:

"You have broken my heart."

"But the girl, a medical student, laid her white hand lightly on his breast a moment and then shook her head and said:

"No; there isn't the least evidence of organic lesion. I notice a slight palpitation, due no doubt to excessive use of cheap cigarettes, but otherwise the organ is quite perfect."—Washington Star.

We Can Supply It

If, in handing you a prescription, the physician says, "You may have some difficulty in finding one of the ingredients in this," come directly here. We will have it if it's to be had. All new or rare drugs come to this store first. As soon as anything new appears we stock it because our prescription business is so large and come from so wide a territory that we are sure to soon have a call for it. We carry, and have demand for scores of remedies that many drug stores do not handle at all.
