LEE'S BURIAL CASKET.

Strange Manner in Which it Came When It Was Needed.

Mrs. LeSalle Corbell Pickett tells this story connected with the burial of General Robert E. Lee. It seems that when he died at Lexington, Va., the North river, a tributary to the James, had overflowed its banks, and Lexington was cut off from all communication with the outside world. A warehouse was washed away and with it all the supplies contained therein, including all the coffins in the city.

"In this extremity," writes Mrs. Pickett in Ippincott's, "Professor Nelson of the University of Virginia was consulting with some of the other professors as to what could be done. In the midst of their dilemma two boys came up to them in a timid way, hesitating to approach the group of dignified strangers, yet feeling the necessity of imparting the information they were bringing. Each feared to be the first to speak and pushed the other on, saying:

"You tell."
"No; you tell. You saw it first."
"No; you saw it at the same time."
"Saw what?" asked Professor Nelson, who was a judge of boys, and perceived that there was something of unusual importance on their minds.

"Yes; saw what?" repeated one of his companions.

"Encouraged by the readiness to receive their tidings, one of these replied, 'A coffin.'"

"We saw it," affirmed the other.

"Yes; we saw it there upon the shore—there by the island."

"On the shore—a coffin? Where?"

"Just about three miles from town. We saw it," said the boy who had first spoken. "Maybe nobody's in it. We was too scared to do more than see the outside and then we tuck out. 'Tain't never been used. It's bran' spankin' new."

"I wonder if they really saw it or only imagined it," said one of the gentlemen.

"Professor Nelson arose and turned to the boys, saying:

"Come and show us the way."

"The boys led on and all followed, uncertain as to what they were to find, but trusting that in some way heaven had graciously supplied their great necessity. Along the river bank they walked until their two guides stopped beside a long closed box that had floated down the swollen waters in the great flood and drifted ashore. In the box was a beautiful coffin."

They carried home the box and in that casket all that was earthly of the famous general was laid to rest in the college chapel.

Balks the Jail Breakers.

A detective was talking about jail breaking.

"Down in Colombo," he said, "they have got a very good dodge against the jail breaker. It's simple too. Just bricks. You see, the Mutual jail at Colombo is surrounded by a very high brick wall. Well, the last dozen courses of these bricks are laid loose, without mortar. So when you try to escape you climb stealthily, hardly daring to breathe, up the wall, and with a sigh of relief you reach the loose course at the top and—clatter, crash, bang, clatter—a thousand bricks in the profound silence fall with a noise fit to wake the dead and a dozen warders rush out and you climb down sadly into their waiting arms."—New York Press.

Persian Pipe Bearer on Horseback.

A picturesque feature of Persian field sports is the pipe bearer, an important retainer who rides close behind his master, bearing the whole elaborate paraphernalia of the Persian water pipe down to the glowing charcoal suspended in a small brazier. If the party is a large one it will generally be found that some member of it is riding soberly along, pulling steadily at a large silver kalkan, or water pipe, the pointed base of the water bowl being securely supported by a strap fixed to the peak of the saddle.—Wide World Magazine.

In Former Days.

The songs that mother used to sing. Although she never brags. Were sixty times as good, by long. As our newfangled "rags!" —Youngtown Telegram.

The lickings father used to give. But then the kids were twice as bad. As what the kids are now. —Los Angeles Express.

The pies that mother used to bake. Although she never brags. Were better than the kind they make inside those paper bags. —Milwaukee Sentinel.

SECRET WRITING.

Simple Cipher System That Keeps Postcard Messages Private.

Postal cards would undoubtedly be in much greater demand than they are for purposes of correspondence but for the fact that the messages they convey are open to all through whose hands they may pass. Yet this objection is easily overcome.

There are some beautifully simple ciphers that are almost impossible for any one not in the secret to read. Only by luck, for instance, can even the expert find the key to a short message written in the "trolls" or "grill" cipher. It is extremely simple, and thousands of people use it to baffle folks who take an interest in the contents of post-cards.

To use it all you have to do is cut a few oblong holes in a blank post-card, place it over the postcard, you mean to write on and write your message in the holes. Then take the upper card off and write some natural reading sentences round the cipher words.

Any inquisitive person, reading the card when it reaches your correspondent's house will find a message of no interest whatever. Only your correspondent himself—or herself—can read the real message, and that by placing on the card a blank card cut in exactly the same way as your own.—Pearson's Weekly.

Better Part of Valor.

Sister—So Willie Jones kicked you, did he? And did you kick him back? Bobby—No, I didn't. If I had then 'twould be his turn again.—Boston Transcript.

Kindness is catching, and if you go about with a thoroughly developed case your neighbor will be sure to get it.
