FADS AND FASHIONS.

New York, April 27.—The long expected has happened and the wanted skirt, in the pannier style and its various modifications, has arrived. So far the new style finds its expression principally in evening gowns of a more or less elaborate nature and the models show no exaggerated effects in drapery. However, the season has only just begun and there is no doubt that before the season has reached its climax there will be seen models carrying the new style to absurd and ridiculous extremes.

When one gets away from the picturesque evening frocks, one finds fewer extreme draperies, but all the skirts in soft materials show considerable fullness and the tucked up drapery in one form or another is being widely exploited. Whether it will be accepted by either the fastidious women or the crowd remains to be seen, but some of its versions are really delightful. Not every material is suitable for this effect. In taffeta this kind of skirt is decidedly bouffant in the upper section, full and straight and limp below, and is rather too extreme to tempt any but the radicals and the adventurous. But in the softer stuffs it is less extreme, and when well made has cachet and charm.

A very handsome frock shown in one of the shops was of very soft sheer creamy lingerie material over an underskirt of black satin—or at least with the skirt of black satin below the tucked up puff of the lingerie overskirt. This puff fell quite limply but very full and followed a slight slanting line downward from front to back. From under the tucked up edge fell a full plaited frill of very fine cream lace. There was a full frilled fichu on the simple lingerie bodice and narrow plaited frills finished the long slim transparent sleeves. The girde was of black.

Another charming model with the tucked up drapery had its underskirt of finest cut work embroidery showing with a little plain batiste showing above the deep embroidery. The design of rose and blue and straw color and there was a flat fichu of the cut work embroidery covering almost the entire bodice above a girde of old blue.

A method of skirt drapery which merely gives a little movement to the skirt lines without introducing any extreme lines or actual bouffancy consists in placing a group of tiny horizontal plaits on one side of a skirt that would otherwise hang in slightly full folds—the fullness of course more pronounced in back and sides than in front.

But not all of the new frocks are draped. Indeed, drapery, so far, is the exception and it is only because it sounds a new note that the drapery idea is the thing most clearly defined in one's mind, after a study of the new models. Most skirts in soft materials have considerable fullness, but this fullness is very likely to be held in by some transverse trimming or, at least, to be dragged down into straight clinging lines.

Occasionally one finds a skirt with smooth fitting upper section and the lower part in a plaited flounce which falls perfectly straight and soft, flaring not at all toward the bottom. For the women who consider a broken skirt line unbecoming, there are plenty of models with full length plain front panels, or merely full length button trimming. The full length line is more often interrupted at the waist by a girde or belt than it was a year ago, and often only the full skirt length has the feature, but even this adds height to a figure.

The belted blouse with straight basque figures among the smart frocks and although it cuts the height when in material contrasting with the skirt or when trimmed around the bottom by contrasting material, it is much less trying when it is continued by the line of the skirt without any definite line or band of separation. Some extremely pretty models on this order are made in various soft materials and are particularly becoming to youthful wearers.

The striped chiffons, radiams, voiles and other sheer stuffs make up most attractively and a good deal is done with plain silk and stripes in combination. The primly flowered Jouy silks, too, are often made up with plain one-tone silk, as are the Jouy marquisettes and chiffons.

One sees lingerie stuffs combined with silk in smart looking models, which of course will not bear tubbing; but that is true of most of the more elaborate lingerie models even when no silk is introduced in them. Black satin or taffeta trims some of the best looking lingerie models, and insert lace, openwork embroidery, etc., are made to show up well by hanging them over a veiling of black chiffon or black net. Then, too, black net is used for inserted bands and frills upon sheer white lingerie materials.

The triple skirt, each section rather scant and clinging, and with some border trimmings, is ubiquitous. Likable little frocks of digit or other sheer stuffs, such as marquisettes, crepon, radium, etc., with white or cream ground, have each section of their triple skirts scalloped shallowly and narrowly bound or corded on the edges with black. The simplest of bodices is trimmed in some way to harmonize with the skirt and a girde is of black with sash ends. The effect is peculiarly piquant and pretty. A clever arrangement of pony radium and black taffeta made one very simple frock shown in one of the shops unusually attractive.

Sheer lingerie or net dyed to the color of the material and the heavy lace is often used for the upper part of the bodice in order to make the frock comfortably cool. Modified jumper arrangements with deep yokes and sleeves of sheer material are frequently used for the heavier summer materials.

The heavy soft linens are made this season in many new weaves, most of which are more or less rough, and the cotton corduroys in white are, like these linens, very popular.

The new silk serge suitings are extremely lovely. They come in black and colors, but are unusually smart in white striped diagonally in black or gray. The shepherd's plaid and diamond checked designs in black and white are also good.

Whipcords, two toned and whipcord diagonals are most popular for the coat and skirt suit for early spring wear.

Eyelet embroidered taffeta used in connection with plain taffeta and chiffon of the same color are materials used in the makeup of some very attractive models. Fetching little coatees are fashioned from this material.

Jouy fleur de sole is a marvelously soft silk with gaily colored small roses scattered thickly over the white background, which is checked in a hairline.

Sashes, which are a usual feature upon the present "dressy" frock, are fashioned of gassarmer fabrics instead of the heavier silk or satin.

"TAKING THE RISK"

A man said to an Idaho State Life agent the other day when insurance was offered him for the protection of his wife and children, "I'll take the risk." Have you ever heard a man say that, and if you have, didn't it make you mad? He take the risk, indeed! It's the wife and little ones, who have a right to look to him for SURE protection, who take the risk. And he is superlatively selfish and mean to make them do it. The only risk that a dying man takes is of future torment and the Insurance Company wont insure against that.

THE IDAHO STATE LIFE insures against a loss that is certain to occur, and just remember when a life agent comes to you, that you will some day be dead. The only uncertain thing about life is when it will end. There is one dead sure thing about it, though, and that is that when you die if your assets are less than your liabilities, and you are not insured, somebody is going to suffer. You can't insure against death, but you can insure against some of the effects of it. Another thing, with a TWENTY PAYMENT LIFE or a TWENTY YEAR ENDOWMENT you are only laying away a little each year against old age, and getting the insurance besides.
