WOMEN DEMAND MORE RIGHTS

MRS. WADE WRITES OF WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

General Leader for the Woman Vote Movement in Oregon Discourses

Local "votes for women" disciples are kept in close touch with Mrs. Wade, the Californian suffragette, who is making her headquarters in Pendleton. Mrs. Wade has direct supervision of the spreading of the gospel in this section of Oregon. In a recent letter to local club women and suffrage workers, Mrs. Wade writes: "There is an old saying that 'straws show which way the wind blows,' and if one is looking for straws pointing toward equal suffrage the press columns certainly are full of them, and the wind evidently is strongly set in that direction.

Everywhere, and more and more women, are presenting their claims before all sorts of conventions and associations wherever they are gathered together.

The Massachusetts Universalist convention, at its 53rd annual meeting held last week in Brookline, Mass., passed with but few dissenting votes a resolution offered by Rev. Ada C. Bowles squarely endorsing woman suffrage and committing the church to aid the reform.

Mrs. Bowles took hundreds of suffrage leaflets to the convention, and put them into the hands of the ministers. All through the proceedings she watched for her chance (which some of the brethren earnestly hoped she would not get) to offer her resolution.

When the committee on official reports came to that on "Social Service," outlining the plans for the social service work to be undertaken by the churches of the Universalist denomination, her opportunity came. Speaking of a series of thirteen articles by ministers that had appeared recently in the Universalist official paper regarding this plan, she said that not a one of them had even mentioned a word in behalf of one half of the world's population that had been repressed so many years, to the injury of the race as a whole. She then offered the suffrage resolution. It was carried on an aye and no vote.

The Unitarian State convention also passed a similar resolution at its recent meeting in Boston.

The General Federation of Women's Clubs, soon to meet in San Francisco, will bring many of the representative women of the east, west, north and south face to face with the women of the great free states of the Pacific slope, (alas, for our Oregon!) and it is likely that the few antis, if they are any, will see the great light. Eastern Oregon sent a good delegation to the last biennial meeting on this coast. Are the club women of this part of the state quite as alive to great public questions as they were a dozen years ago? They do fine work locally, but how about the broader vision?

An anti-suffragist once said, "Women's unfitness for the ballot necessitates her continuance in a narrow environment."

This reminds us of the old negro who was asked why he did not seek religion. He replied, "Boss, I ain't fit."

"Well," said the other man, "why don't you get fit?"

Uncle Peter answered, "Boss, I ain't fitten to git fit."

Iron Where It's Cool

Don't do your ironing in a hot kitchen; use an electric iron and iron in the coolest room in the house. Wherever there is a light socket, you can use an electric iron.

You will be able to do your ironing in about half the time it takes now, for you don't have to change irons or wait for them to heat. Your clothes will look better too, for there's less likelihood of scorching them.

Another thing: You'll find it costs less to heat an electric iron than the old fashioned kind. So everything is in favor of the woman who irons with electricity.

We keep all sizes and styles of electric irons constantly on hand, and you will find our prices very modest.
