Progressives Win.

The Chicago convention has just ended with a victory for the reactionary element of the republican party. Sentiment in La Grande, however, is in favor of a progressive program as regards the development of this city and its many resources. For a fuller description of this platform and daily news from the front, watch the upper right hand corner of the third page every day.

WRECK OF AN ACTOR.

Macklin's Last Attempt to Play Shylock as His Mind Failed.

Macklin, the famous English actor, made his last appearance on the stage as Shylock. He came ready dressed for the character into the greenroom, where all the performers were assembled and prepared. Looking round, he said:

"What—is there a play tonight?" All were astonished, and no one answered.

"Is there a play tonight?" he repeated.

"Why, sir, what is the matter? 'The Merchant of Venice,' you know," said the actress who was to play Portia.

"And who is the Shylock?" asked Macklin.

"Why, you, sir—you are the Shylock!" "Ah!" said he. "Am I?" and sat down in silence.

Every one was very much concerned and alarmed. The curtain went up, however, and the play began. Macklin got through the part with every now and then going to the side of the stage, lifting up his hair with one hand and putting his ear down to the prompter, who gave him the word. He then walked to the center of the stage and repeated the words tolerably well. This occurred often through the play. Sometimes he said to the prompter:

"What is it? What do you say?"

From that time Macklin's great talents were lost to the public. His memory gone, he spent most of his time in an elbow chair in his home in Covent Garden, where he died.—Kansas City Star.

He Dined Out. An incident took place in a restaurant in New York city one evening not long ago that, besides being amusing, was the cause of considerable thinking on the part of three men who were regular patrons of the place. They were seated together at a table when they noticed that the waiter who had come to take their orders was not the one who usually served them.

"Where is John this evening?" one of the group asked.

"He has had his hours changed," the waiter replied. "He is out for dinner now."—New York Tribune.

Jenny Lind in the Park House.

When Jenny Lind made her tour of America in the early fifties under the management of P. T. Barnum, Madison was the only Indiana city in which she would sing. The city still boasts of how the diva stopped there on her way down the Ohio river from Cincinnati to Louisville. The city had no auditorium large enough, so one of the largest pork warehouses was emptied and scoured and filled with flowers to remove any lingering odor. Men and women traveled from all parts of the state to hear Jenny Lind sing in the park house, some of them spending from three to six days on the journey.—Argonaut.

Relieved. A young north side father on arriving home the other evening found his wife in a state of great excitement.

"Harold," she exclaimed, "baby got hold of the ink bottle this morning."

"And what has he done?"

"Spilled ink all over the new dining room rug."

"That can be easily remedied. I thought you were going to tell me that the misguided child had written a novel."—Pittsburgh Post.

GOMPERS SENTENCED

deferred. This is the second time that Justice Wright has imposed identical sentences on Gompers and Morrison for the same offense. The first time the sentences were set aside by the supreme court.

"Because these respondents have shown themselves ready to repeat the additions of the past, penalties in these cases ought to be in proportion to the gravity of the offense," declared Justice Wright in his decision. Three of Wright's colleagues sat on the bench with him when he read his decision which was lengthy. Although the justice skipped many pages of his reading it consumed nearly two hours. As the decision of the court was read, Gompers and Morrison were ordered to stand and face the court. They did so. Both were pale. Wright then sentenced them.
