J. H. Peare and Dr. Biggers left yesterday for a long automobile trip which will in the end take them to the grand lodge of the Elks at Portland. They went to Pendleton, from there to Walla Walla, and will make their first important stop at Tacoma where they will visit the big automobile races. A trip to Seattle and then down to Portland is the itinerary.

GROTESQUE STUPIDITY.

Some of Stanley's Experiences With the African Natives.
The natives of central Africa are described by the late Sir Henry M. Stanley in his autobiography as being incredibly stupid. He tells, for example, of one native who, with another man, was sent in a canoe across a river to fetch a company of men to camp. After waiting an hour Stanley went to the river, where he found the two paddling each in an opposite direction and blaming the other for his stupidity. They were in a passion of excitement and quite unable to hear the advice of the men across the river, who were bawling directions to them how to manage their canoe.

Another stupid fellow was generally saved from punishment because his mistakes were so absurd. One day we were floating down the Kongo. Near camping time, as he happened to be bow man, I bade him stand by and when I called out seize the grass on the bank to stop the boat. In a little while we came to a fit place, and I cried, "Hold hard, Kirango!" "Please God, master," he replied and forthwith sprang on shore and seized the grass with both hands while we, of course, were rapidly swept on down stream.

The boat's crew roared at the ridiculous sight. Nevertheless his stupidity cost the tired men a hard pull up river, for not every place was available for a camp.

ICEBOUND ANTARCTICA.

Twice as Large as All Europe is the South Polar Continent.
The antarctic continent has been estimated to be at least twice as large as Europe. The evidence of paleontology is to the effect that Antarctica was once connected with the more northern lands, at least with South America, and that in prehistoric ages some tremendous convulsion of the earth's crust resulted in the sinking of the "submarine" floor, until in some places it is now 4,000 fathoms, or more than four miles below the surface.

All around the great land mass of this continent there is a deep ocean bed cutting it off from every other land of the earth and setting it apart as a region more unlike the rest of the globe than any other continent or island.

Explorations have proved that in times before the advent of man upon the earth this most southern land had a temperate or even a warmer climate. There are fossils, both animal and vegetable, which indicate this. The formation of the rocks in Antarctica also is of volcanic origin and volcanic activity, notably in the case of Mount Erebus, which is not yet extinct. A vast mountain range, perhaps at one time a continuation of the Andes, exists in Antarctica.—American Review of Reviews.

Long in the Public Eye.
Opinions regarding what constitutes being before the public may vary, but one Kansas City negro who presides over the buffet in a certain Kansas City club has an opinion which is original, to say the least. The negro and a customer were engaged in a friendly debate regarding the former's age a few days ago. Their respective opinions varied about twenty years, the negro holding out for the smaller number of years.

"You've been around Kansas City twenty years, and you can't make me believe you're young," the customer argued.

"Ah knows Ah've been in business here for a great many years," was the reply, "but that's not saying Ah'm old. You see, Ah's been befob de public so long people jest natchly thinks Ah'm older than Ah am."—Kansas City Journal.

Returns of John Gray.

This interesting drama will be at Sherry's Monday and Tuesday. It shows Gray happily married and idolized by his wife and little girl but to lose his all, then commit theft, and drink and stock speculation causes him to finally drop from sight. After 15 years Gray returns, but not as a man, nor does he receive a welcome after his confession to his wife, who has thought him innocent all these years. This, with the "Animated Weekly," showing the current events, "The Power of Thought," a Rex drama, and "Jimmie Pulls the Trigger," a clever comedy by Gaumont, makes a well balanced and interesting program.

July 3rd and 4th, "Heroes of the Blue and the Gray" will be the feature and July 5th and 6th a three reel Biograph feature entitled, "The Post Telegrapher." Watch for Sherry's announcements for features.

BOARDED AN ICEBERG.

The Floating Island That Wrecked a Ship Saved Its Crew.

Curious indeed was the experience of the crew of the German ship Hanna with an iceberg. The Hanna struck an ice island in latitude 52 degrees a little before midnight in a freezing gale. The impact carried her bow far up on the berg and imbedded it firmly in the ice. Her back was broken by the force of the collision and before morning was wrenched away from the forward part by the battering seas and sank.

When the Hanna struck the boats were lowered, but only one escaped being swamped after pulling away from the doomed ship. It was soon found, however, that this boat was leaking and that no amount of baling would keep it afloat more than a few hours, so the mate in command of it made for the berg and succeeded in climbing up on it to a place of temporary safety. From the broken timbers of the Hanna's bow the castaways built a rude shelter and snared sea birds to eke out the scanty supplies they had been able to save from the ship.

As the ice island drifted farther south into warmer waters and began perceptibly to shrink the shipwrecked men were a prey to constant fear that the melting mass might turn turtle any time and precipitate them all in the sea, from which it had so providentially saved them. Also they feared it might "calve" and the part breaking away from the main bulk might carry them with it to destruction. The constant grinding and groaning of the great ice raft filled their hearts with constant terror, and the deserted seas added to their despair.

But the berg held together for eight months, and the Hanna's men traveled 750 miles before they were finally picked up in latitude 41 degrees, suffering from frostbites and hunger, but otherwise no worse for their long exposure.—New York Press.

WEST POINT CADETS.

Their Education Costs the Government About $3,500 Each.

The selection of West Point as the place for the National Military academy was due to its advantages from a military viewpoint, for its rugged beauty and its severe climate were calculated to be beneficial in the foundation of that sort of character so essential to a successful officer.

The academy was formally opened on July 4, 1802, with ten cadets and five officers as instructors. Its success is said to be due to the administrative ability of General Sylvanus Thayer, who became its superintendent in 1817 and served as such for sixteen years. This officer is known as the "father of West Point."

A cadet's education costs the government about $3,500. All cadets are on the same footing. The pay of a cadet is $600 per year and one ration per day or commutation thereof at 30 cents per day. The total is about $700.50, to commence with his admission to the academy. Immediately after his admission the young man must spend $100 for uniforms.

After graduation the cadet is eligible to the rank of second lieutenant and is appointed to whatever branch of the service his record entitles him. Those who are highest in class honors are generally appointed to the engineer corps.—Leslie's.

Polite and Tactful.

The mayor of a French town had, in accordance with the regulations, to make out a passport for a rich and highly respectable lady of his acquaintance, who, in spite of a slight disfigurement, was very vain of her personal appearance. His native politeness prompted him to gloss over the defect, and after a moment's reflection he wrote among the items of personal description, "Eyes dark, beautiful, tender, expressive, but one of them missing."

Willie's Question.

"Pa, was you a doctor?"
"Not that I know of."
"Then why do people have so much to say about the patients of Job?"—Boston Transcript.
