

MILLERS BEAT MILLIONAIRES

CUP IS HUNG UP.
 The La Grande Commercial club last night hung up a magnificent loving cup for the winner of the Twilight league race. The cup is a beauty, or rather will be, for its design only has been selected. The next game of the race will occur tomorrow night promptly at 6:30 when the clerks and railroaders play, insuring a better game than that played last night. Some of the city's best amateur talent is included in these two teams.

By J. D. Gillilan.
 Two clubs of the Twilight Baseball league lined up on the diamond last evening for the first time. There may be finer looking millers and nobler appearing millionaires on earth, but if so they did not come inside the ball grounds last night. The verdict of the cheering thousands of the grand stand as they enfiled with defiance-breathing banners was with the Millers for they were nattily dressed in navy blue while the Millionaires came lugging along any old pick-up. The Millionaires were most successful though, in almost everything; for they got more failures in home runs, more geying from the brass-throated fans whose hoarse commands rent the very sky; they got also a very fine nest of goose eggs and some sore arms.
 It is worth a trip half way round the globe to see that giant Frees pitch. He polses on one heel, looks anxiously toward heaven a moment and then catapults a ball toward the people who are watching while the millionaire writes sign language in the air with his bat.
 But Fred Meyers is the artist. His spit balls are the latest exhibition of scientific discovery in the national game. Webster's dictionary describes a spit ball thus:
 "A ball produced by moistening one side of the ball with saliva. It is said to leave the hand with greater speed than when dry and to take a more uncertain course."

 This is a literal fact, for it is doubtful if the La Grande catcher had any idea where the ball was going after it left his hand, and it is certain the man at the bat never found out. After this display of scientific baseball lore had been made, Stange took the middle of the diamond. Stange stung the batter first thing. The ball appeared to approach the man with the club in a very inviting manner until just when he was about to strike; then the pesky thing cut a pigeon wing so as to leave the ball in the hands of Jay Van Buren, occasionally; but when Stange made the only fine hit on the Millionaire side and tried to make a home run he got badly stung even though he could have made "home" if he had "hit the dirt", but it will be a matter of argument for the succeeding generations whether he did not willingly sacrifice that sole possibility for a score just to save his clothes.
 By the end of the fourth inning it had become nearly so dark the crowds began to start so as to be able to get out of the gate before it got to late to find the way home. The gate keeper, Charley Harding, will open up a special account in his bank today (if he gets the gate receipts counted) the interest of which should be applied to buying suits for the millionaires.
 Among the many enthusiasts were seen half a dozen ladies, J. H. Rudd, the new Y. M. C. A. secretary, Hon. T. H. Crawford, Clyde Scranton, Tom Scroggin and "Toughy Kid."
