NUMBERS IN A PARADE

Easy to Estimate Them According to United States Army Rules. It is remarkable how the average civilian overestimates the number of persons in a parade. Take, for example, the recent suffragist parade in New York. It was said that there were 15,000 women in line, and some enthusiasts put it even at 20,000. But it is easy to estimate such numbers approximately. Here is the rule as laid down in the "Field Service Regulations" of the United States army: "The strength of a body of troops may be estimated from the length of time it takes to pass a given point. Assuming that infantry in column of fours occupies half a yard per man, cavalry one yard per trooper and artillery in single column per gun or caisson, a given point would be passed in one minute by about 175 infantry, 110 cavalry at a walk, 200 cavalry at a trot and five guns or caissons." Allowing for spacing between companies, battalions and regiments, all of which is according to mathematical rule, it takes a regiment of 1,000 men divided into battalions just ten minutes to pass, or at the rate of 6,000 an hour. And this supposes no breaks in the line. These rules, it must be remembered, are for trained soldiers used to a long step and to keeping up without straggling. No civilians, even militant suffragettes, ever have kept up or could keep up this pace, and in the women's parade many of the organizations walked in column of twos. This parade took about a half to pass—New York World.

SOCIETY AS SHE SEES IT.

Hetty Green's Caustic Comments on Present Day Conditions. Mrs. Hetty Green, New York's woman financier, has never grown accustomed to modern manners. "Girls and young matrons in my young day," said Mrs. Green recently, "enjoyed balls and parties where gentle folk mingled. Nowadays such affairs are but scrambles for men who have made fortunes in stock gambling in order to parade their bejeweled wives and daughters before each other. "Some of them wear so few clothes that it makes me blush. I went to the opera once. I saw one woman there whose frock was cut so low I could count the joints in her backbone. I am almost tempted to say I could count her ribs. "I don't know what society is coming to. The men are about as well-mannered as the average horse jockey, while the women are mannish and hoydenish and altogether the reverse of what their grandmothers should have desired them to be. "These days, too, women are forever gadding about instead of remaining at home and making things comfortable and attractive for their husbands and children. There's no home life." Precautionary. Robbs: Why do you strike hard uppe for a man every time you meet him? You know he never has any money. Sloths: Merely in self defense, my boy. If I didn't strike him he'd strike me.—Philadelphia Record.

KEEP CUTS CLEAN.

Then There Isn't Anything For Them to Do but Heal. The cut made by the surgeon should always be kept absolutely free from germs. If infection occurs we know that some one has blundered. Accidental cuts, on the other hand, are almost invariably infected. The germs of disease are everywhere. No matter how small the cut may be or how brief its exposure to the air, germs are almost certain to enter. If an accidental cut is to heal quickly and well all germs must be carefully removed at the first dressing. When we consider how many are the ways in which a cut may become infected we can understand why such precautions are necessary. Infection is often introduced by the very implement that makes the wound. Only surgeons use sterilized instruments. A knife or a pair of scissors or a piece of glass or crockery is almost certain to plant germs in the furrow it plows. Germs may also enter from the clothing, from the hands of whoever rushes to help, from the first piece of cloth or handkerchief used to stanch the flow of blood or from the water used for the first washing. Since the avenues of danger are so numerous, it is safest to assume that infection has occurred. It follows that every family should understand some of the simplest methods of sterilization. Heat is the simplest of all. The mother of a family should keep a supply of soft linen rags that have been thoroughly boiled. She should keep them not on an open shelf with towels or other cloths, but done up in a carefully closed oiled paper bag or protected from the air in some other equally effective way. For washing the wound she should use only water that has been boiled. When the doctor comes he will add some kind of chemical antiseptic, and it will be proved once more that a clean cut can do nothing but heal.—Youth's Companion.

CHANGEABLE CHICAGO.

Has Eight Counties and Many Varied Spellings to its Credit. "Few people know that Chicago has been in eight different counties of Illinois," said an old Chicago man. "It was first placed within the limits of Madison county, Illinois, then being a territory, Sept. 14, 1812. "Chicago was included in the following counties so far as Illinois is concerned: Madison county, 1812, 1816, Clark, after the state was admitted to the Union, 1818; Cook, Jan. 15, 1831. "The name of the city, too, has been spelled more than a dozen ways. Father Hennepin called it Che-cau-gou; La Salle, Sheengou; on an old French map of 1682, Chikagou; on another old map (1673) in the Historical society library at Madison, Wis., it is Chicaugua; Father Gravier (1690) wrote it Chikagou, and in 1700 St. Some wrote it variously Chikago, Chikagou, Chikcu and Chicago, he being the first to give the letters the arrangement which finally was settled upon as the authorized spelling. Charlevoix gave the same spelling in 1721. In the Greenville treaty (as revised) it is Chikgu.

"In an old deed filed away among the archives of the Chicago Historical society, as applied to the river or creek (1774). It is plainly written Chikagou. The word was the Indian word for garlic or wild onion and signified to the red men strong, mighty, powerful, courageous.

"Watches" on Board Ship. On board all ships a series of "watches" are established, so that work is shared equally among the sailors. To aid this object also the crews are divided into two divisions, star board and port. A ship's day commences at noon, and there are seven watches. The watch which is on duty in the forenoon one day has the afternoon next day, and the men who have four hours' rest one night have eight hours the next. This is the reason for having "dog watches," which are made by dividing the hours between 4 p. m. and 8 p. m. into two watches.

Living on Rubber. The rubber slug is one of the many pests of rubber plantations. It attacks the young trees and feeds on the juice oozing from the cuts. Doubt having been cast on the suggestion that any animal could subsist on rubber, a successful of juice was placed before some rubber slugs, which lapped it up like a cat lapping up milk. Scientists have come to the conclusion that this slug contains some rubber digesting ferment as a gastric juice.

What Jane Said. "Did you hear the satirical reply Jane Sharp made to Tommy Gilder?" "No; what was it?" "He said, 'It wouldn't be my money you would marry me for, would it?'" "And what did Jane say?" "She said, 'What awful conceit!'"
