Snakes Scared Expressman.

Jersey City, July 27.—Because he had what the officials considered a fine excuse, Wm. Conklin, an express messenger, in charge of through matter from Denver to Jersey City, is not to be punished for deserting the car enroute. The reason, according to the messenger, was that four rattlesnakes, consigned to the New York zoo, got loose and chased him about the car, finally deserting him to feast on a consignment of live chickens. When the rattlers got busy with the chickens, Conklin "beat it."
