Farmer Buys City Home.

F. A. Day, who owns a fine farm near the city, today purchased the John Adkin residence on Pennsylvania avenue. For several years Mr. Day has moved his family into the city in order to secure our school facilities, and he decided it would be better to buy than to be compelled to hunt a different house every fall. George H. Currey, the land man, negotiated the sale.

Police Officer Accused.

Woes of the Prompter.

In the production of a play there is an important person who is never seen and should not be heard by the audience, and yet he may speak more lines than the principal actor. It is the prompter. Here is a description of a prompter's labors, written by one of the genus:

"I, as prompter, had been kept very busy throughout the piece. In addition to keeping the actors on their lines it was my duty to make all the outside noises. I had screamed 'Help!' I had shouted 'Kill him!' I had dropped planks to cover up deficient pistol reports. I had thundered, hailed, rained, sung like a woman, marched like an army and howled like an infuriated rabble inflated by drink. The last straw came when the hero, supposed to be pursued by hounds, sidled to the wings and hissed:

"Bark, you fool, bark! Why don't you bark, you idiot?"—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Origin of the T Rail.

Robert Livingston Stevens called from New York to Liverpool before the advent of the ocean steamer. In those days the passage took two months, and Stevens passed many an hour, jack knife in one hand and a piece of wood in the other, brooding over a problem that had often worried him—how to run a railroad without stone stringers for tracks. He wanted to get an iron rail that would "hold" and would take the place of the thin strips fastened to the chair of the roadbed. Just before he reached England his whittling revealed to him the solution of his problem, and that solution took the form of a T rail with a broad base that could be applied direct to a solid wood support. That T rail is still in use on all the railways of the world.

ONE HALF THE WORLD wonders how the other half exists, but all wonder at the wearing quality of DAY'S BIG FIVE OVERALLS AND SHIRTS

I will be in La Grande until the first week in September. Come early. Do not delay having your work done until the last week.
