CONSIDERABLE HAY IS DAMAGED

RAINS SPOIL MUCH OF BOTH THE FIRST AND SECOND CROPS.

Timothy Hay Falls to $14 Per Ton in Ton Lots, $15 by Bale.

But little of the second crop of alfalfa has been baled yet on account of the recent rains. Much of the second crop was down during the rains of last week and a great deal of the hay has been spoiled for baling or moving. Similar conditions marked the harvest of the first crop. This should result, however, in plenty of cheap feed for stock the coming winter, as there will be large amounts of hay that will be suitable for winter feed in the pasture, but could not be accepted by the commercial demand. However, there is a plentiful yield of extra fine hay and it is expected that the second crop will soon reduce the present price.

Timothy hay has dropped from $15 to $14 in ton lots, but still holds the higher figure in orders of a few bales. Oats is selling at $1.60 per cwt. Quotations in the local markets for today are as follows:
