Optical Illusions.

Professor Stirling explained a variety of optical illusions, including the after effects of seen movements and entasis or convexity in curvature. He demonstrated how the Greek architects had realized the existence of entasis and had constructed their horizontal beams in convex form in order to remove the apparent concave appearance and had given to the pillars on the Parthenon and other ancient buildings just such a bulge as was necessary to destroy the erratic effect of a series of parallel columns.

In dealing with colored shadows Professor Stirling demonstrated the great difficulties that occasionally beset the designers of dress materials.

Recently in Manchester, he stated, a dispute arose between a designer and the weavers upon the appearance of a pink shade in some finished material. The dispute would have ended in a lawsuit had not a scientist demonstrated the fact that the existence of pink was merely an illusion produced by a certain arrangement of other colors and that no colors had been introduced except those supplied by the designer.—London Standard.

African Superstitions.

Concerning the superstitions that are rife in Nigeria, Africa, a traveler says: "The bird which flies in at your open door in the sunlight, the bat which circles round you at night, the small bush beasts which cross your path while hunting, all may be familiars of witch or wizard or even the latter themselves disguised to do you hurt. Sometimes the terror of witchcraft will scatter a whole town. Should the suspicion of witchcraft fall on any one only trial by ordeal can free him. The most usual trial is that of eating 'esere,' a poisonous bean which almost invariably kills the suspected person. The ordeals of boiling oil poured on the palms of the hands and of pepper-corns inserted in the eyes are far less dreaded, not only because their results are practically never fatal, but because the physical anguish entailed is acknowledged to be less intense than that caused by 'esere.'"

The Two Ways.

A hunter of the old school, who lives among the foothills of the Alleghenies, was teased into making a wager of $10 that his antiquated gun would shoot a bullet through a railroad cross-tie. The old hunter was confident of winning, as he had tested his gun on cross-ties, hickory, oak and even ironwood.

The bet was to be decided in the lumber yard back of the depot. The old hunter arrived at that place in advance of the others. He arranged several of the thickest cross-ties for the test by standing them against piles of lumber with their flat sides forward. Imagine his astonishment, if you can, when the man with whom he had made the bet, upon arriving, exclaimed:

"Flatways! Are you daffy, man? Turn them endways!"

The hunter of the old school lost.—Philadelphia North American.

Deadly Snakes.

The deadliest of snakes is said to be the mamba, an African cobra. It flies at everybody and everything; it goes out of its way to quarrel; it will even come down from a tree to solicit an interview. Over in India there is the great king cobra, or hamadryad, a size larger quite as fierce (it has been known to chase a man on horseback; he had to ride for his life), but its poison is a degree less virulent. The mamba, however, may be considered dangerous and ceases to interest the patient after a few minutes. Among the Australian cobras, the pit vipers of America and the great West African vipers there are species with evil reputations, and the most alarming feature is that the aggressive snakes are all desperately poisonous.

August and July.

"August," the name of the month, is accented on the first syllable. "August," the adjective, is accented on the second syllable. This is due, no doubt, to the fact that, though both started from the Latin "augustus," they have arrived by different routes. The adjective is the French "auguste," while "August" commemorates the Roman emperor's title, the French "aout" and the middle English "aunst" or "aust." "July" used to rhyme with "duy," even in Johnson's time, as it had done centuries earlier and as it does in southern Scotland to this day.

Goethe's Mother.

The poet Goethe owed much of his greatness to his mother, a woman well made to bear such a son, a perfect mother and, better still, his intimate friend and confidant. Brought up in strictly bourgeois and limited circles, with very little education, such were her natural intelligence and sympathy that she afterward became the friend of princes, poets and philosophers and her house a rendezvous for the great minds of her day.

A Good Memory.

Church—You say Flatbush has a good memory. Gotham—Sure thing. Church—Well, he borrowed $5 from me three months ago, and he's forgotten to pay it back. Gotham—Oh, no.

he hasn't! He's never tried to borrow any more, has he?—Yonkers Statesman.

He Got 'Em.

Friend—What was the title of your poem? Poet—"Oh, Give Me Back My Dreams." Friend—And what did the editor write to you? Poet—"Take 'em."—McCall's Magazine.

A man cannot leave a better legacy to the world than a well educated family.—Thomas Scott.

Automatic Fire Doors.

The construction of a fire door and its installation may be standard in every way, but for the door to be of service it must be closed at the time of fire. As employees of a plant cannot always be depended upon to close the doors of the plant, because of panic or other reasons, fire doors should be either self closing or automatic. A self closing door is one which closes by itself as soon as a person has passed through. This door is normally always closed and never should be allowed to be blocked open. The automatic type is held open by means of a weight or catch, which has connected with it a series of fusible links. In cases of fire the solder on one or more of the fusible links melts from the heat, releases the weight or catch, and the door closes. This type of door should be employed wherever it is necessary for the door to be kept open at times, but otherwise the self closing door is preferable.—F. P. Walther in the Engineering Magazine.

Sartorial Genius.

The genius in tailoring accomplishes without effort things that refuse to yield to the most determined efforts of the ordinary mortal. He apparently creates out of nothing. His touch transforms the shape of the customer and the set of the garment. He molds the ungainly form into an Apollo, and the misfit garment falls into natural place in his hands. The lines of his draft are unapproachable, and his system is infallible. He knows just when the shoulder is to be advanced or receded. He understands intuitively just how much the waist is to be suppressed or filled in and how much spring is required. He never makes a mistake, and if the journeyman ruins a garment beyond repair in the making the genius sets it right with a few touches, even though to repair it is beyond the ordinary cutter's skill.—Tailor and Cutter.

One Exception.

There are so many ways of offending a waiter at a big restaurant that it seems difficult to think up a new one, but a customer who lunched at a famous bistro achieved it. Being in a sentimental, contemplative mood, the customer remarked, "I suppose people from every country under the sun dine here, eh?"

"It is depressing to reflect on the generations that have sat at these old tables," the customer resumed dreamily. "Old and young, grave and gay, from far and near, rich and poor—"

At that point in the reverie the waiter stared up indignantly. "Not poor," he corrected. "It costs money to eat in this place."

Then he presented the bill, and the customer agreed that it did.—New York Press.

Queer Birds.

There are two rare species of birds in the Amazon forests of which no specimens, it is said, have ever been brought away—the "bellbird" and the "lost soul." These names are derived from the effects produced by the cries of the birds, the former having a voice likened to that of a silver bell and the latter possessing the eerie accomplishment of crooning in such a manner as to produce goose flesh on the unfortunate person who hears its song.

Lunar Athletics.

The "man in the moon" must surely regard with amused contempt our much vaunted athletic records. A good terrestrial athlete could cover about 120 feet on the moon in a running broad jump, while leaping over the barn would be a very commonplace feat. He would find no difficulty in carrying six times as much and running six times as fast as he could on earth, all because the moon attracts bodies with but one-sixth of the force of the earth.

At Sea.

"Isn't the ocean grand and majestic?" "Yes, and there is an indefinable something about it that impresses me strangely."

"What is it?"

"I was just trying to determine. I have it. It's the utter absence of billboards."—Washington Herald.

Natural Inference.

"Here's an umbrella I've kept for three years," he said proudly.

"Isn't it about time you returned it?" she replied.—Detroit Free Press.

A Little Hazy.

"Pa, who was Jonah?"

"I can't place him just now, but he was some sort of an inside man."—St. Louis Post Dispatch.
