DR. E. B. FYKE DELIVERS FINE DISCOURSE.

"Ideal Man" Is Theme of Pulpit Orator at M. E. Church.

Sunday proved a big day at the First M. E. church. In the morning after a splendid anthem by the choir under the direction of Prof. Armstrong, Dr. E. B. Fyke preached a strong sermon, using as his subject "The Helping arm of the Church."

In the evening Dr. Fyke chose as his subject "The Ideal Man." A large audience heard his splendid address. A brief summary of his lecture follows:

The scarcity of men in comparison to the demand for men in every age has been appalling. No less true of our own age.

Dr. Fyke showed that there had been a complete transition of the basic principles of manhood from the physical to the spiritual and intellectual using as an illustration the Arena scene from Quavadis.

He found in the modern Ideal the following elements of manhood: Self-Discovery. He said the greatest knowledge is self knowledge. In self discovery everyone will find they have a body but they are a spirit. This dual nature has expressed itself in history.

To this element he added self reliance, stating this is not an age of plaguesism. He urged young people to trust their own thoughts. Quoting from Emerson, "Trust your own thoughts, someone will say tomorrow with masterly greatness what you have thought all the while, and you will be compelled to take your own opinion from the lips of another".

Then he placed by the side of these elements self respect, not egotism but rising to the knowledge of the thought of the Creator regarding men. He said: He is the answer to all that has preceded Him in creation. He bears the image of God. It cost much to redeem him. He has a glorious destiny before him. Can we think little of ourselves when God thought so much of us. To this he added self mastery, illustrating by Napoleon the mastery of ambition, drawing a vivid picture of a forest fire uncontrolled. He brought before his hearers the fact that fires burn in our own beings that if uncontrolled will bring destruction to character.

The last element was self investment. This he illustrated by Lincoln's investment in the Union and its great results. Then closing: He found a concrete example in the Christ and closed his discourse by the words of Pilate "Behold the Man".

TO LADIES:

The Secret of a Woman's Charm

Concerning her outer appearance is shown only by her tailor, provided she has a tailor to dress her. Otherwise, she shows her secret with a thousand women who are buying the same ready-made garments. And then where is the charm? Take us into your confidence. We will give to your gowns and frocks that individuality which your personality demands. accentuating certain lines of your figure, softening others, and creating an effect distinctly characteristic of yourself. As to cut, style and moral effects in fabrics, we are always in close touch with Paris and New York. Yet our prices compare always favorably with those for the ready-to-wear articles. And during this month we can make some pleasing concessions to your purse.

To GENTLEMEN

Clothes That Fit and Wear

And when we say "Fit" we don't mean those "Picture clothes" that you see in the magazines. Anybody can get an artist to dip his brush in paint and "throw a fit" on paper. We mean a real fit-- which means clothes really made for you, not ready-made for thousands of men about your size. We make clothes---not with paints, but with pains, with intelligence, good taste and style; and stitch them with honesty and good service. And so our clothes, made from the best materials, not only fit you perfectly, but wear long. Call and look over our stock and let us quote you prices. We can satisfy you.
