SAFETY PIN IS REMOVED

Union county people are pleased to learn of the successful operation upon Miss Wilma Wade, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Wade of Summerville at Portland this week to have a safety pin removed after the girl had swallowed it during a fit of laughter. The Oregonian recites:

Ten inches below the throat, a three inch safety pin, which had been swallowed by Wilma Wade, 12 years old of Summerville, Or., and had been in her bronchial tubes for six days, was last night recovered in St. Vincent's hospital by two Portland physicians in an operation which is thought to be unique in Portland. No record of the recovery of a safety pin under such circumstances was found in medical journals devoted to such operations.

Wilma Wade, who is the daughter of a Summerville rancher, was seized with an attack of laughter last Friday and in the indrawing of her breath as she laughed, the safety pin, which she was holding in her mouth, was drawn back into her throat. It was closed, allowing it to pass smoothly down the thorax and into the bronchial tubes.

After a number of home remedies had been tried to remove the pin, the girl was brought to Portland Sunday, and taken to St. Vincent's hospital. There the operation was performed yesterday. A tracheal bronchoscope was used to locate the position of the pin, a light bulb, mirror arrangements and a tube being let into the bronchial tubes through a suture cut a medical hook the pin was drawn into the tube and so out of the passages.
