WHEN THE ALARM CLOCK RINGS

Do you snuggle a little deeper in the covers and wish with all your might that you didn't have to get up in the cold to dress? Well, you're not the only one. There never was but one man in La Grande who liked to get up in the cold, and he moved away.

Here's a suggestion; get one of our

Luminous Electric Radiators

Then when the alarm br-r-r-s-l, press the button, and in a very few minutes your cold bedroom will be warm enough to dress in. Try it just once.

Luminous Electric Heaters cost about as much to run as an electric iron. They furnish the ideal method for warming up bedrooms, bathrooms, cozy corners, etc. On display at our office.

75th Anniversary of Memorable Event.

Alton, Ill., Nov. 7.—Seventy-five years ago tonight there occurred in this city an event which, with the single exception of the John Brown raid, was probably the most sensational feature of the long struggle over the slavery question that preceded the civil war. This was the mobbing and destruction of an anti-slavery paper and the murder of its editor, Elijah P. Lovejoy. Although it occurred twenty-five years before the war, it contributed in a marked degree to that culmination.

Elijah P. Lovejoy was of an ardent, heroic nature, and his advocacy of the cause for which he perished took the form of extremely violent attacks on the institution of slavery and all who directly or indirectly helped to favor and perpetuate it.

In 1826, Lovejoy, then a young man of 24, came from his home in Maine to St. Louis, where he established a school and became an industrious contributor to the press. Several years later he took an active part in politics and became editor of a political paper which advocated the election of Henry Clay for the presidency. Although he was unsuccessful in his campaign he earned the reputation and influence of a political leader, but in three years more he became possessed of so much religious zeal that he determined to enter the ministry and he was licensed to preach in 1833.

As editor of the "Observer", a religious paper published in St. Louis, Lovejoy began his most ardent advocacy of abolition. Before long he had become so violent in his agitation that a letter was signed by someone of the most respected citizens of St. Louis which requested him to moderate the tone of his editorial utterances with regard to slavery.

Lovejoy replied to this letter in a statement in his paper which did not tend to conciliate his opponents. After this he was threatened with violence so determinedly that he decided to remove from St. Louis, and in 1836 he came to Alton, which was to be the scene of his death.

The citizens of Alton threatened him without avail, and then mobs destroyed his press. As often as they wrecked it he replaced it, until three presses had been destroyed and a fourth one was ordered. The night after it was received a mob attacked the building. Lovejoy was there with some friends, and in the fight that followed one of the attacking party was killed. When the mob then undertook to fire the building Lovejoy was one of the three volunteers to make a sortie. As soon as he got outside he was assailed with a storm of bullets and fell dead.

The tragic death of Lovejoy created a profound impression throughout the country, and an outburst of condemnation from the press. At a mass meeting held in Faneuil hall, Boston, Wendell Phillips made his first public address. It was the speech that made Phillips famous, and from that great meeting dated his tremendous oratorical efforts against slavery.

Doctors Use This for Eczema

Dr. Evans, Ex-Commissioner of Health, says: "There is almost no relation between skin diseases and the blood." The skin must be cured through the skin. The germs must be washed out, and so salves have long ago been found worthless. The most advanced physicians of this country are now agreed on this, and are prescribing a wash of wintergreen, thymol and other ingredients for eczema and all other skin diseases. This compound is known as D.D.D. Prescription for Eczema.

Dr. Holmes, the well known skin specialist writes: "I am convinced that the D.D.D. Prescription is as much a specific for eczema as quinine for malaria. We have been prescribing the D.D.D. remedy for years."

We ourselves vouch for the D.D.D.

Prescription for eczema and absolutely guarantee that it will take away the itch the instant you apply it.

If you are suffering from any form of skin trouble we would like to have you come to our store, for we have had the agency of this remedy for so many years that we can tell you all about D.D.D. Prescription and how it cures eczema. In fact, we are so sure of what D.D.D. will do for you that we will be glad to let you have a $1 bottle on our guarantee that it will cost you nothing unless you find that it does the work. For that matter a trial bottle for 25c ought to be enough to absolutely prove the merits of the remedy.

Drop into our store anyway and we will tell you all about this great remedy.
