TRY WOMEN FOR MURDER

Augusta, Me., Nov. 13.—Witnesses are being rounded up and other preparations concluded for the trial of Mrs. Elsie Hobbs Raymond, which is scheduled to begin in the Kennebec county court here next Monday. Mrs. Raymond is to be tried on a charge of murdering Mattie Hackett the mystery of whose death has remained unsolved for more than seven years. The murder was so mysterious and atrocious that it roused the whole state of Maine.

Mattie Hackett was the young daughter of Levi Hackett of the town of Readfield. She was known to everyone in the rural community in which she lived and was about to become a bride. It was just after supper time on the evening of August 17, 1905, that Mr. Hackett asked his daughter to get some food for a young tramp who had asked for supper and a night's lodging. Mattie Hackett was wiping the dishes.

The father and the tramp started out to the barn to feed the cattle, leaving the daughter to get the tramp's meal. The other members of the Hackett family were spending the evening at a neighboring farmhouse down the road.

The supposition is that soon after the father and the tramp left for the barn the young woman was called from her home by some person and accompanied that person to a point about 100 yards from the door. On the return from the barn Mr. Hackett and the tramp heard an outcry and hastening to the spot found the young woman strangling. They carried her to the house and summoned aid.

It was several moments before a cord was discovered drawn tightly about Miss Hackett's neck and it was found she was dead. Farmers beat the bushes and cornfields about the Hackett home for several days in an effort to find the persons who were supposed to have committed the crime. The young tramp was never accused of having any share in planning or carrying out the murder, although he was held in the local jail for several days as a witness.

Suspicion soon fell upon Mrs. Raymond, an acquaintance of the murdered girl, who was believed to have been jealous of her. Mrs. Raymond and her husband gave an account of their movements on the evening of the crime which established an alibi that the state could not find evidence enough to destroy. The grand jury at that time failed to return an indictment.

At various times the attorneys in the state attempted to review the evidence and gather new evidence sufficient to warrant the indictment of somebody, but nothing definite was done until the grand jury met last April and returned an indictment against Mrs. Raymond, charging her with the murder. The arrest of Mrs. Raymond after seven years of veiled insinuation and suspicion made a sensation throughout this section of Maine. Since her arrest the woman has been confined in jail here.

Mrs. Raymond and her family appeared to welcome the prospect of a trial and express themselves as certain of acquittal. Her husband, her hand of the accused woman, will be a leading witness for the defense. It is supposed that the state will endeavor to prove that Raymond's friendship for the murdered girl aroused Mrs. Raymond's jealousy and served as a motive for the alleged murder.

Flagged Train With Shirt.

Tearing his shirt from his back an Ohio man flagged a train and saved it from a wreck, but H. T. Alston, Raleigh, N. C. once prevented a wreck with Electric Bitters. "I was in a terrible plight when I began to use them," he writes, "my stomach, head, back and kidneys were all badly affected and my liver was in a bad condition but four bottles of Electric Bitters made me feel like a new man." A trial will convince you of their matchless merit for any stomach, liver or kidney trouble. Price 50 cents at all drug stores.
